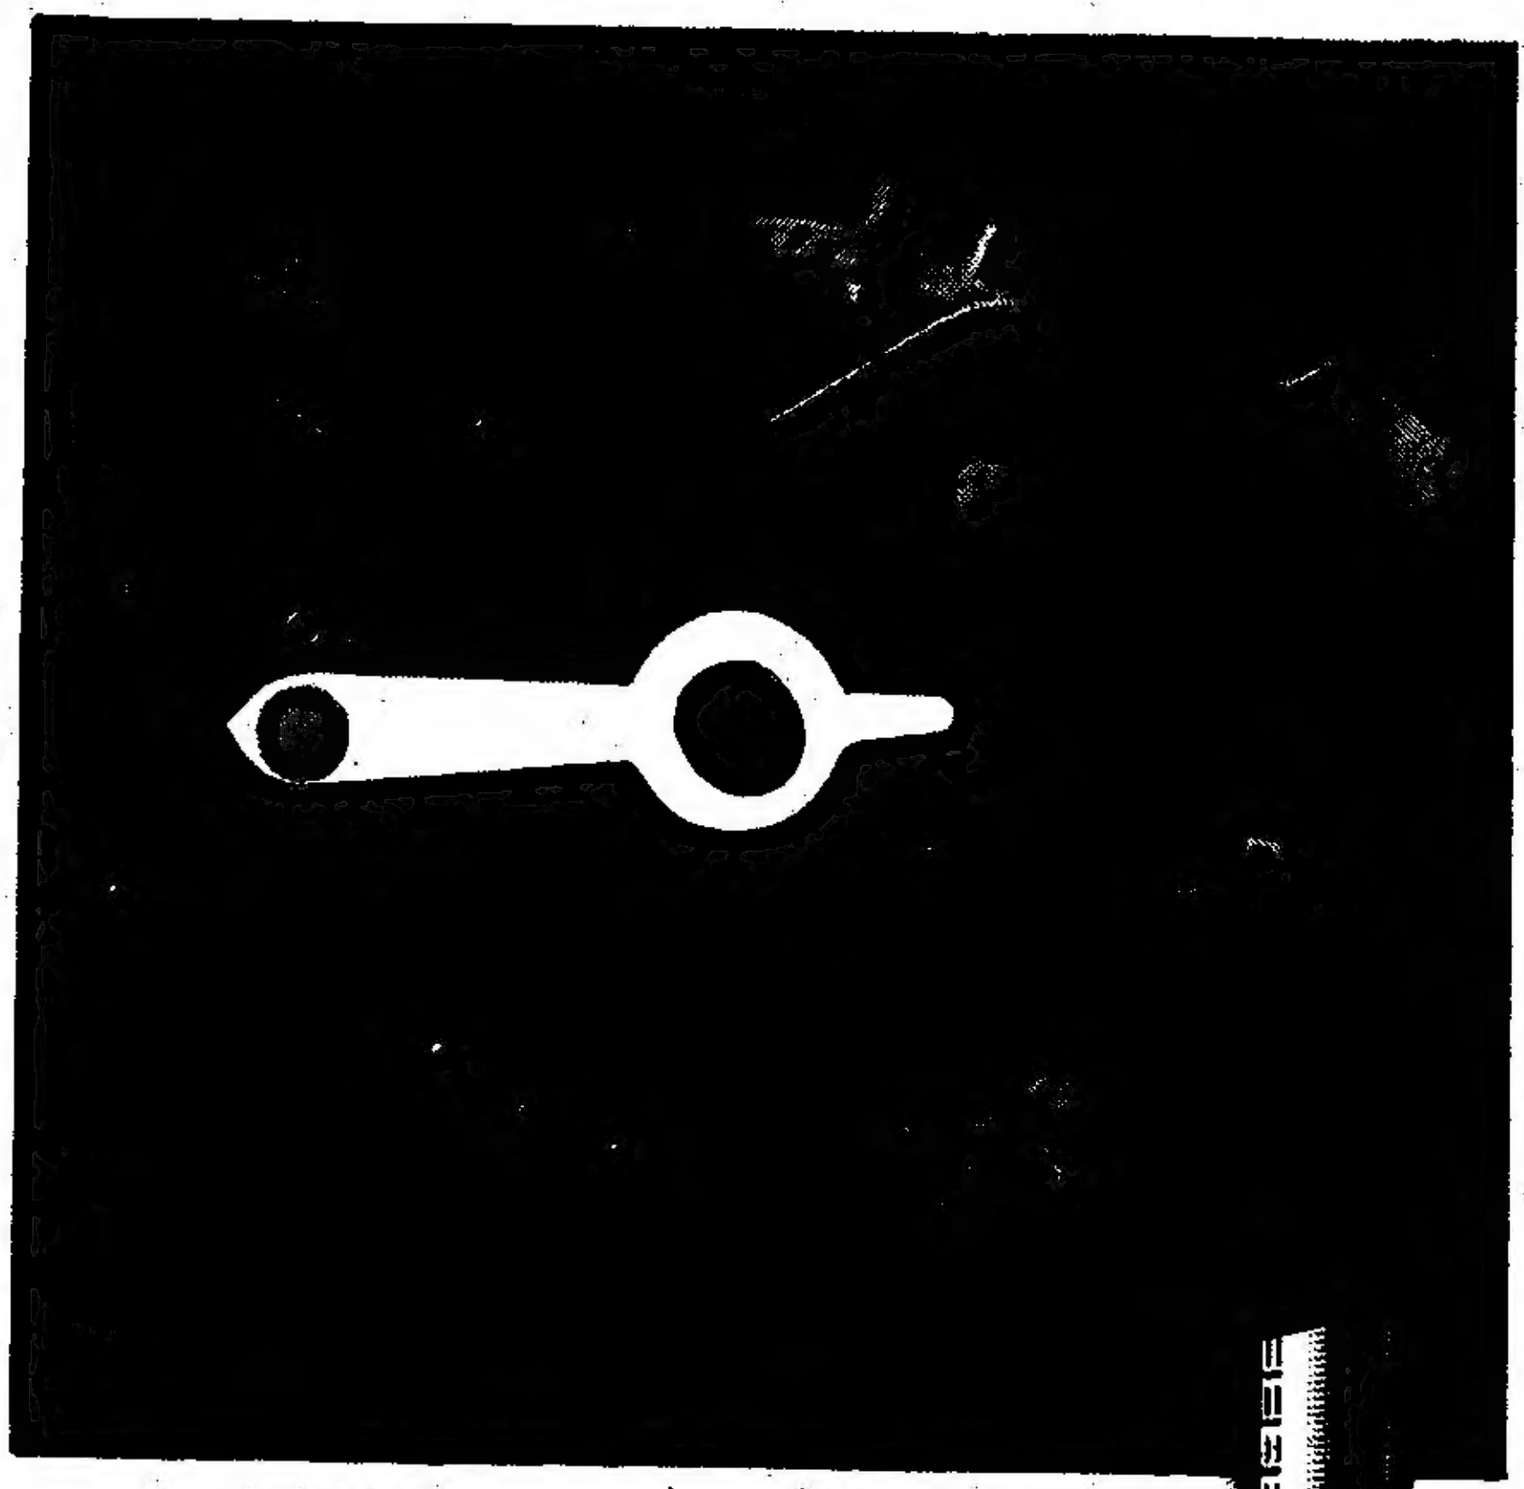
The greatest enemy of your watch

baffled...



SHOCKS are the greatest enemies of a watch. Your watch is always in danger: even if you are careful, you may hit your arm against something, or your watch may slip when you are putting it on. If you visualise the minute size of the pivot of the balance-staff — this most essential and most fragile part of a watch — you will realise that but one shock is sufficient to break or twist the pivot, causing the watch to stop. Small wonder that replacing damaged balance-staffs used to be one of the watchmakers' most frequent jobs.

In the Cyma Research Department, however, an Anti-Shock Device was created which solved the problem once and for all. The Cymaflex Anti-Shock Device is a triumph of inventive genius, and its practical efficiency has proved quite extraordinary. There is no doubt that this is one of the most important and valuable inventions in the history of watchmaking. In recent years, millions of Cyma watches have been fitted with the Cymaflex Anti-Shock Device, and now a damaged Cyma balance-staff has become extremely rare. The Cymaflex Anti-Shock Device — protected by exclusive Cyma patents all over the world — is now fitted to all Cyma models. This is one of the reasons for the astonishing reliability of Cyma watches. See that your next watch is a Cyma!

The Cymaflex Anti-Shock Device is protected by the following patents:

May You Be Inscribed In The Book Of Life

"May you be inscribed in the book of life" is the beautiful greeting of Jews at Rosh Hashonah, the New Year. Jews have a preoccupation with life. Peace, justice, righteous living, freedom, mercy to the weak, all these are good. They are the Jewish ideals. But they must emerge out of life. A people of historical escapes, great catastrophes, and a rolling succession of tragedies through the ages, may be excused for having a rather morbid view of death. For them life is everything. To the living there remains the Jewish destiny of service to mankind through keeping its eye fixed on the foundation stone of man's basic purpose: to advance human brotherhood, for there is no other.

In the spring, at Passover time, the Jew is jaunty, in fine fettle. Nothing is dying except the winter. All of Nature is renewing itself and so does his self-confidence as continuity appears to be more than an illusion. "I will not die, but live," exults the Jew, "and proclaim the works of the Lord." But the New Year comes in the autumn when "the sere and yellow leaf" is pushed around by a chilling wind. The New Year is a day of judgment and solemnity, a day for making new resolutions for the better conduct of life. The Jew is lucky in this regard. Whereas, others have only one New Year, which is often marked by carousing only, the Jew has two, that one and Rosh Hashonah, a High Holy Day.

When Jews greet each other at the New Year they wish each other health, happiness, prosperity, more life, and lots of it. No one says, "May you be inscribed in the book of life so that you may make use of the biblical ideals to guide your way of living for the benefit of your own character and the betterment of your group." But the ancient Jewish principles which rest on the Mosaic Code and which form the basis of civilization, at least in recitation, constantly await translation into meaning for the daily life of all men. As the originators of these fundamental rules the Jews have a greater duty toward helping to make them concrete than any other group.

The basic Jewish principles are sensible and practical. There is nothing otherworldly about them and they were not intended to be held within the covers of a book for safe-keeping. The Jewish values make for individual character and within the strong bonds of family attachment become the underpinnings of a household. What happens within any one household should be of the utmost importance to the commonwealth. There the Jewish philosophy of life is founded on attitudes concerning the treatment of the stranger, the toiler, the beast in the field, the fatherless, the weak, the small, with specific admonitions that stress justice and not charity, human rights rather than benefaction. This system of living requires effort. Its ultimate aim is peace, happiness, and security for all human beings.

Judaism is stern. It does not countenance anything less than the root belief that every man is his brother's keeper, and proceeding from that, it regards the promotion of good will as a major individual and group obligation supported countless times by biblical admonition. But these are the sterile days which Amos, the Prophet, predicted, when the Lord would send a time of famine, "not of bread, nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the words of the Lord."

At a time when it is all too clear that civilization needs a return to a consideration of "first things" to reduce conflict and improve the distribution of all the good things of the good life, and when it should be the role of the Jewish group to keep in front of the world the place of humanity first before prosperity, its resolution is weakened by the insatiable appetite for heaping up wealth, gadgets, and worldly goods that is common to this era.

"May you be inscribed in the book of life so that you will work for the establishment of the highest standards in Jewish responsibility." This requires fidelity to the family values lest they be subverted, for no group is stronger than its individual households; to individual ethics which make the ethics of the group and of the nations; to the common good which means opposition to war, hunger, oppression, national arrogance, injustice, and the corroding poverty which renders self-realization impossible for so much of humanity.

Jews were not meant to be indifferent. They are supposed to pray daily for welfare, peace, loving kindness, and mercy where justice alone is not enough. The human society they are supposed to stand for is one built on equality, tolerance, and mutual aid. For this attitude to be real and authentic it cannot remain in the custody of rabbis and other workers. It has to be built in. Jews will have to be Jews with the solidarity that characterizes Quakers as Quakers, and mean what they say they believe. The whole obligation can be summed up in the phrase from the story of the Exodus: "I, and not my messenger."

Our Passing Days

BY RABBI PAUL LIPKIN, TEMPLE BETH SHOLOM, MONTREAL

The High Holy Day season speaks to us of values. It is a moment of reflection and inner examination. The frivolities of the summer are ended and the colour of the leaves and nature suggest a more solemn and serious mood. All of us think about life and death. We reflect on the year that is to come. What does it have in store for us? What tragedies or blessings will befall each one of us? Some lives will be born. Others will find their way to the grave. But none of us, whether it be this year or next, can escape the eventual end that faces all of us.

There are few predictions that one can make with any certainty, but one of these is that human life is limited. It is all too brief and its days are few in number. None of us have any assurance that there will ever be a tomorrow for us here on earth. For some, today may be their tomorrow. No one therefore can live in the future. The present in reality is man's only future. Our Rabbis long ago admonished us to live each day on earth as though it be our last.

As we prepare to greet another New Year, let us for the purpose of considering values, assume that it may be the last one for us here. What would we do with our limited time? How would we live? This much is certain. Most of us would not waste any of it. Everything would have to have meaning. There would be so little time and so much to do.

First, we would have to take a perspective of the world in which we live. What do we really need? This is the age of gadgets. It is a culture that emphasizes the acquisition of more and more things as a road to happiness. Gadgets are advertised as being time-savers and affording us pleasant comforts. Much of modern invention is indeed a blessing. It makes life much more enjoyable. It gives us more time for leisure. Indeed, these gadgets are good servants. They are dangerous, however, when they become our masters. But the mere possession of these things does not make for happiness. It only contributes to comfort. When these possessions possess us they become a burden. When these gadgets become an end rather than a means, they destroy human happiness.

What really matters in our lives are the very simple and common things. Luxury and wealth cannot purchase love and respect. The natural fragrance of nature cannot be bought. During a recent visit to a home, the owner led me to a picture of his beloved mate and he stared at it. He was silent, but the point was crystal clear. He would gladly give all his wealth for the life of the one he loved. Yet how much time did he steal from her in order to acquire all of these possessions?

What does a man need? Tolstoy has written a classic short story on this point. He relates the story of a Russian peasant who is anxious for more and more land so that he is always denying himself any joy or peace in order to acquire more of it. Finally a golden opportunity is afforded him. He is offered as much land as he can claim from sunrise to sunset. He begins strong, eager and greedy as the sun rises and he sets out to encircle as much land as he can. Each pace grows faster. He cannot walk fast enough. Finally as the sun is setting, he makes one frantic effort to encircle the entire land. As he crosses the finishing line, he falls to the earth dead. How much land does a man need? Six feet long and three feet wide.

Yes, if we had one more year to live, it would be more important for us to know and enjoy our own children, our loved ones and friends than to acquire a new car, a new radio or even a home. We should cultivate the home as a source of living. It should inspire us with values. In our own day, however, parents are so busy living outside the home, that they find themselves strangers to each other within their own domicile. If we had only a limited amount of time, more of it should be spent upon religion. We should make more attempts to know our own literature and history. We should know why we are Jews and why it is a badge of honour. But we are so busy with a multitude of superficial activities that the main bulwark of our life, religious faith, is often neglected.

Then again, if our time were borrowed, it would be better for us to be our real and true selves. We spend a good deal of our precious time trying to impress others. Keeping up with the Joneses is for so many a mo

Teach Us To Number Our Days

BY RABBI NORMAN N. SHAPIRO, BETH TZEDEC SYNAGOGUE, UNIVERSITY AVENUE, TORONTO

In his famous book, "The Idiot", Dostoievsky tells of the emotional reactions he experienced during what he had supposed were the last five minutes of his life. He relates how on December 22, 1849, he stood on a scaffold in the snow-covered military parade grounds of St. Petersburg. He and several other prisoners had been sentenced to death for alleged crimes against the government and the Czar. Three men, their heads covered with black hoods, had already been fastened to the execution posts. The firing squad stood erect and poised. Dostoievsky was sixth on the list. In five minutes he knew his life would be snuffed out.

At the last moment, the prosecutor dramatically appeared and read the official document of pardon, thereby freeing him and the others from the jaws of death. Those five minutes, which Dostoievsky thought were his last, seemed like an eternity to him. In his book he tells us how he divided up these precious moments. Two minutes to take leave of his comrades, two minutes to think for the last time, then a minute to look about him for the last time. Under duress he learned the value of time. In five treasured minutes of uncontrolled anxiety and indescribable fear, he learned the value of every minute and second. Then, to quote the author, "I would change every minute into a century. I would not lose a single one. I would keep track of all my instants and would not spend any of them lightly."

While Dostoievsky's tale sharply reminds us how a lifetime may be compressed into a few moments as it unfolds in a kaleidoscopic review during an accident or in anticipation of disaster, it seems to me that most people, generally speaking, fail to appreciate the value of time. Our lives are governed by the seasons we live in and the exacting schedules of time, business work, school and play, take their toll.

We are now approaching the High Holyday period. When the past year passes by in review, and we plan for the coming months, I wonder whether we couldn't, at least periodically, during the coming year, pick up a book, yes, in English, on a Jewish theme or subject, or else keep ahead of current events by reading Anglo-Jewish periodicals, or by attending to Sabbath services.

Yes, we beseech God in our Prayer Book, to teach us, oh, God, to number our days that we may get a heart of wisdom. Te us to appreciate the value time so as to better understa ourselves and others. These some thoughts and remind which come to my mind as I t occasion through the medium this article to wish the readers the Canadian Jewish Revie very happy, healthy New Ye

The Twentieth Century Jewish Woman

BY MRS. BENJAMIN ROBINSON, 56 FORDEN CRESCENT, MONTREAL, PRESIDENT OF THE NATIONAL COUNCIL OF JEWISH WOMEN OF CANADA

(Mrs. Robinson, president of the National Council of Jewish Women of Canada, led the Canadian delegation to the Triennial Conference in London, England, of the International Council of Jewish Women and was elected a vice-president of that organisation.)

When you meet and talk with the representatives of Jewish women from all over the world at one conference, as I did in London, England, last May, you inevitably bring away certain overall impressions and it is some of these impressions that I would like to share with my fellow Canadian Jewish woman here. It seems to me particularly appropriate that this should appear in a special New Year's issue of the Canadian Jewish Review since the advent of the new year is traditionally a time for stock-taking.

The triennial in London brought together 29 delegates and more than 100 observers from 14 countries. I had the honour of heading the Canadian delegation, which included Mrs. Percy Jacobson and Mrs. Ruth Schwartz, of Montreal, and I was deeply conscious of speaking not only for the 5,000 women who are members of Council but also for all Canadian Jewish women. It was an honour I did not take lightly. I regretted that Mrs. Harold Lorie, of Toronto, immediate past president of Council, who helped in the re-organization of the International in 1949, was unable to be with us in London for many of the friends she made in the International inquired after her.

This triennial was especially memorable for it brought the women of Israel into the International for the first time. Seven women's groups, representative of all classes of Israeli women, joined to form the Israel Council of Jewish Women's Organizations so that they might speak with a united, non-partisan voice for all the women of that new state. The Israeli delegation was headed by Mrs. Eliahu Elath, wife of the Israeli Ambassador to England, a woman whose graciousness and sensitivity impressed us all. In her speech of acceptance she said:

"I have had the privilege of many thrilling experiences since I was born. If I had lived only for one of these, I would have said 'Dayenu' (sufficient): 1) I was born in Israel; 2) I was present in the United States to hear the proclamation of the creation of the State of Israel; 3) and now I have the honour of representing the Council of Jewish Women of Israel at this auspicious gathering of Jewish women in the world".

She then asked the support of all Jewish women for women's work in Israel and invited us to hold the next triennial of the International in Israel. The invitation was joyously accepted and I hope that when the International meets in Jerusalem in 1957, many Canadian women will be present.

The five days of intensive meetings in London heard the reading of reports by delegates, the discussion of resolutions and the sharing of problems. The resolutions recommended the upbuilding of Israel; study of Judaism; increased participation in Jewish communal affairs; legislation for equal educational opportunities; for increased participation of women in all aspects of national life; amelioration of the legal position of women under Jewish law; ratification of the Genocide Convention; and support of the United Nations Declaration of Human Rights.

Our English hostesses, the League and the Union of Jewish Women, were most gracious in receiving us and thoughtful of our needs. Receptions were given by them; by the Chief Rabbi of Great Britain, Israel Brodie, and Mrs. Brodie, at their lovely home; the London County Council; and by Mr. and Mrs. Elath. I was particularly happy to see again Lady Nathan, of Chart, president of the Union of Jewish Women, whom I had met a year ago when I represented Council at the Coronation and who had left my husband and me with a very pleasant memory of the days we were guests at her country estate.

But what I want to give you here is what I consider the most important impression I have brought back to Canada with me of our International. It is of the remarkable maturity and social consciousness which Jewish women have and are developing in this country. By social consciousness I mean the knowledge of and participation in community and national life.

In the western democracies, this of course is not new. The number of American and Canadian Jewish women who concern themselves with wider problems of education, health, social welfare, government and international affairs has been increasing steadily for decades. But today in all countries from Morocco to India, this new Jewish woman is emerg-

The Bronfman Collection Of Canadiana, Major Contribution To The Source Material Of History Of The Country

BY HON. J. W. PICKERSGILL, M.P., MINISTER OF CITIZENSHIP AND IMMIGRATION OF CANADA

The Jewish Public Library is, of course, primarily the possession of the Jewish community of Montreal, but the dedication ceremony in which we are taking part today is a formal recognition of the fact that this Library has become a national institution. By establishing, on the initiative of Mr. Samuel Bronfman, this collection of Judaica Canadiana, the Jewish Public Library of Montreal is assembling in one place all the writings of Canadian Jewry, all the written sources of information about the Jewish communities in Canada, all the publications and periodicals of special interest to Canadian Jews, the publications on relations between Canada and Israel, all the studies in Jewish history and Hebraic literature written by Canadian Jews, and, indeed, every kind of book or publication of Jewish interest published in Canada.

I am told that there are already over three thousand items in the bibliography of the collection and that it is planned to keep the collection up to date as new publications appear. This brief description makes it clear that the Bronfman Collection is a major contribution to the source material of the history of Canada. I would be guilty of a grave sin of omission if I did not mention in this connection the splendid initiative of the Canadian Jewish Congress in sponsoring the publication of two volumes recording the history of the participation of Canadian Jews in the Second World War; itself a fine chapter in our common Canadian history.

By collecting all books relating in any way to the Jews in Canada, the Jewish Public Library is seeking to perform, for an important segment of our national life, what the National Library is designed to accomplish over the whole field, and that is the preparation of a bibliography of all books and publications by Canadian writers on all subjects and by writers of all nationalities about Canada, and the gradual acquisition of a complete collection of these publications.

The National Librarian, Dr. W. Kaye Lamb, assures me that the existence of the Bronfman Collection will be of the greatest possible assistance to the National Library in the field covered by this valuable collection.

Now it so happens that I am, by profession, a historian; and that I happen also to be the member of the government of our country who is responsible to Parliament for the administration of the National Library. And it was on these two counts that Mr. Carl Goldenberg urged me it was really my duty to share in this ceremony of dedication. But I assure you that I am here not to perform a duty reluctantly undertaken, but to acknowledge the honour and the privilege of being permitted to share in a significant national occasion.

I understand that your Librarian, Mr. David Rome, spent much of his early life on the West Coast and that in his capacity as a historian, he is an authority on the Jewish pioneers in British Columbia who were prominent in both business and politics in the early days in that province. It is a coincidence that the National Librarian, Dr. Lamb, is himself a British Columbian; and I believe it is a happy evidence of the developing sense of unity in our country that the Pacific coast, which has long been somewhat outside the main stream of our national life, is now contributing to the preservation of our national heritage in institutions which are nation-wide in their range.

In establishing this collection of Judaica Canadiana, you are following an example set by the Jewish in Great Britain, the United States, France, and Holland. I mention a few similar collections of which I have been told. It is appropriate that the Jewish Public Library of Montreal should now become a shrine of Jewish Canadian literature. Montreal has both the first and the largest Jewish community in Canada; the city is the natural capital city of Canadian Jewry; and it is looked upon, by Jews all over Canada as the centre of Jewish learning and culture in our country.

The dedication of this magnificent collection of Jewish Canadiana is, however, only one of many significant milestones in the history of your Library, and

"Canada's Leading Music House"

The Creative Spirit Of Liturgical Music In Our Times

BY REVEREND NATHAN STOLNITZ, 511 MARKHAM STREET, TORONTO

Cantors, synagogue choir conductors, liturgical composers and musicologues from the entire North American continent gathered for a three-day conference that was held from June 28 to July 1, in the Catskill Mountains, at Highmount, N. Y. They assembled for the purpose of discussing ways and means of bringing Hazanut to a level and standard of which it is worthy. It is a great pleasure to report that this conference proved to be most productive, and will certainly be remembered as opening a new era in the cantorial history of America.

The scepticism that prevailed for a while in certain circles, and the rumours that Hazanut in America had reached the stage where it was dying out, have proved to be absolutely false and unfounded. I observed with great satisfaction that of the huge number of delegates from all over the continent most of them were young cantors and synagogue choir conductors, already born in America. These young members of our profession take great interest in all the immediate problems of Hazanut and are willing to take over the great responsibility of continuing our holy work which through generations persisted in being one of the main factors of Jewish national religious life.

We have to admit that new variations of Hazanut are being created, more modern trends are given to the art which are more in keeping with the present times; but on the other hand, emphasis is being put on the great importance of preserving the generations-old Hebrew musical treasures and on the necessity to infuse the modern art with the old, traditional, cantorial wealth.

This is best illustrated by the serious endeavour on the part of the new leadership in Hazanut to follow to a great extent the creations of the previous, talented, composers by copying them and by offering wide possibilities for the young generations of cantors to study their liturgical compositions, most of which unfortunately perished in the ruins of Europe, and thereby forming a bridge between old and modern Hazanut.

We have every right to hope that these young people who hold leading positions in the cantorial ranks and who combine academic and Jewish education as well as musical knowledge (a number of them have finished University and also had a few years' study in well-known American Yeshivot) should be capable and worthy of the holy profession as legitimate heirs of Hazanut, and should continue to exert the tremendous spiritual influence that Hazanut brought for centuries over Jewish life, accompanying the Jew from the crib to the grave.

In accordance with the reports and the animated discussions that were expressed by some delegates it stood out that actually almost the entire cantors' camp has been inspired by the desire to consolidate all the three trends, Conservative, Orthodox, and Reform, into one strong national corporation, that will harmoniously coordinate all the activities and raise the standards of Hazanut and Hazanim. Some steps have already been taken in the above direction. It is worth while mentioning here the news from a Chicago delegate (Cantor Goldberg) that the local cantors' association which has been in existence for forty years and which boasts a membership of fifty "Bikkurei Zibur", has lately expressed a readiness to affiliate both existing branches, Orthodox and Conservative, into one organization.

A delegate from Connecticut said that during an event in aid of the Cantors' Seminary (of the Cantors' Assembly, at the Jewish Theological Seminary, New York), the Conservative cantors worked with the Orthodox and Reform cantors and due to this co-operation the musical undertaking was highly successful. The State of Connecticut alone brought in one third of the sum of $25,000 which was put as an objective to be collected for the above important purpose, by the cantors of the U.S. and Canada during this year.

A further step in this direction was made at the convention itself on the part of the Cantors Assembly through its executive director, Cantor David Putterman (the driving spirit of the Conservative cantors' camp) who declared that individual cantors belonging to Orthodox or Reform circles can join the Cantors' Assembly. He also urged the delegates to behave ethically towards other cantorial groups, and trends, to rea-

The Bethesda-Chevy Chase Jewish Community Group: A Unique And Inspiring Experiment In Living Judaism

BY I. N. DUBIN, M.D., CHIEF, HEPATIC PATHOLOGY SECTION, ARMED FORCES INSTITUTE OF PATHOLOGY, WASHINGTON, D. C.; FORMERLY OF MONTREAL

During my recent visit to Montreal I was impressed by the growth of Jewish institutions in my native city. The new buildings of the Jewish Public Library and the Y.M.H.A., the expanding Jewish parochial schools and religious congregations all bore witness to it.

As I saw how my Jewish friends were working out their destinies as Canadian Jews in the Montreal community I found myself comparing their institutions and customs with those of the Jewish community of greater Washington. In particular I reflected on my own activities as a Jewish parent and on those of the Jewish Community Group to which I belong:

How were we meeting the challenge of present-day living as Jews, Americans and world citizens? Would the values which we were passing on to our children sustain them in their own time? Have we truly made meaningful the precepts of our ancestors? Have we succeeded in extracting the essence of Judaism? These are all questions many parents ask but few can answer.

In searching for an answer the modern Jew has gone to various systems, some strictly traditional, some refurbished, others newly devised. American and Canadian Jewry has seen in the last generation a flourishing of synagogues, a growth of parochial schools and a development of community centers. These we have in Washington also. But in comparing the Jewish institutions of Montreal and Washington, it seemed to me that our Bethesda-Chevy Chase Group had no exact counterpart in Montreal. We are neither a religious congregation nor a community center. Our design is perhaps bolder, our approach more experimental. But I can describe our group better than I can categorize it.

To the north of the District of Columbia, in Montgomery County, Maryland, lie three suburbs of Washington, all colorfully named — Bethesda, Chevy Chase, and Silver Spring. Latest estimates of the population (1950) are as follows: Chevy Chase, 2,000; Bethesda, 30,000; Silver Spring, 42,000. In the summer of 1943 three Jewish families in the Bethesda-Chevy Chase area met to discuss the problem of Jewish education for their children. There were no Jewish institutions in that area; something had to be devised.

At first fourteen Jewish families in that vicinity were found who wanted to organize a Jewish group. Most of the men were Government workers — scientists, economists, attorneys, persons of modest income. The most pressing need was Jewish education for the youngsters, so plans were made for opening a Sunday School in the fall. This was the inception of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Jewish Community Group (locally known as the BCC Group), the progenitor of three of the five Jewish institutions now existing in Montgomery County.

The school met in the home of Dr. Murray Shear, internationally known scientist of the National Cancer Institute. Dr. Asher Achinstein, noted economist, was the principal and taught one of the classes. By the time school opened in the fall the group had grown to twenty-seven families. Twenty-seven children were enrolled in four classes. Parents served as volunteer teachers. Soon other activities were begun, all run and supervised by the members themselves: High Holyday services, religious festivals, a Friday night observance combined with a forum address by a guest speaker, social activities, and services to the community at large, such as donating a Sefer Torah to the National Naval Medical Center in Bethesda.

By 1947 there were one hundred children in the school, which now had a paid principal, a person skilled in teaching and steeped in Jewish learning. In the meantime the Jewish families of the larger community of Silver Spring (to the east of Bethesda-Chevy Chase) had started a Jewish assembly of their own, inspired by the success of the BCC group.

In 1948, largely under the persuasion of the Jewish Welfare Board, the two groups amalgamated to form the Montgomery County Jewish Community Center. The BCC group handed over its library, property and building fund to the new organization. The

More Remains For Us To Do In The New Year

BY SAMUEL BRONFMAN, OF MONTREAL, PRESIDENT, CANADIAN JEWISH CONGRESS

We enter the year 5715 with fervent prayers that all may live in a world united in peace and human understanding. It is gratifying to recognize that for the first time in generations, no part of the world is engaged in warfare. We are asked to assume that there is peace, though everywhere we feel the threat of aggression and our general relief is attenuated by the uncertain and uneasy outlook for Israel in its relations with its neighbours.

We note with apprehension that Israel's legitimate aim to build itself and to exist peaceably with its neighbours is frustrated. Surely, the time is not far distant when these neighbours must appreciate the contribution which Israel can make towards stability and prosperity in the Middle East.

During the solemnity of our High Holidays, we, as Canadian Jews, will ponder what lies ahead and will undoubtedly rededicate ourselves to the fulfillment of our obligations as citizens of a great land, and how best to fulfil our obligations to Canadian Jewry as well as to assist Jewry overseas. We give thanks for the blessings of health, family and friends, and face the future humble in the knowledge that though we may have accomplished much, more remains for us to do.

We must hope that we may soon enter an era of justice and maturity. In this spirit of true friendliness and steadfast faith, the Canadian Jewish Congress greets the Jewish community on the advent of the New Year and extends its traditional greetings.

Israel, A Living Land For Work And Song

BY MRS. ANNA RAGINSKY, 4350 SHERBROOKE STREET WEST, MONTREAL, CHAIRMAN, MONTREAL WOMEN'S DIVISION, STATE OF ISRAEL BONDS

(For the first time the annual Negev Dinner in Montreal, in May, honoured a woman, Mrs. Anna Raginsky, formerly national president of Hadassah for six years; and national chairman of the Jewish National Fund of Canada. Mrs. Raginsky is known internationally as a long-time builder for Zionism and for the state of Israel.)

"A Living Land" is the name that came to me as I saw Israel again this summer. What a flood of memories swept over me as I recalled my first visit to Israel in 1935. What Zionist would not look forward to a first visit to the Holy Land! It was with joy that I went, almost twenty years ago, thinking of the wonderful contribution the Balfour Declaration had made to the upbuilding of a Jewish National Home.

It was then a time and a land of prayer and of hope, the beginning of the exodus from Europe to Palestine, and so we hoped, and prayed, and in a small measure tried to arouse the emotions of Jews everywhere to give aid in that fine Jewish spirit of philanthropy. We were determined to work harder than ever when the new State was established. With many others I came in 1949 to rejoice on Israel's first Independence Day, but everywhere I found the remnants of Hitler's havoc, tragic and stark. However, Israel was a State, and we could be happy in the realization that 2,000 years of dispersion had come to an end.

My memory went back also to my 1951 visit to Israel, of going through Ma'abaroths, the transition camps. To my horror I had seen hundreds of thousands of men and women and children without a roof over their heads; with no means of livelihood. I recall that those who had stood at the helm in the making of this new State were determined that these sights would soon become a thing of the past. And I had wondered it could be accomplished. Would we be able to carry on with our dramatic appeals, and would further sustenance to the new State be continued?

What changes I found when I came to Israel this summer, in 1954, as a member of the Women's Israel Bond Delegation! We were to make our own survey of Israel's economic development, and we spent two exciting, crowded weeks there. I found "A Living Land". Why do I call it by this name? It is a land where people no longer live in Ma'abaroths, but have their own homes, each with a little garden patch. It is a land where the people are content with the thought that they earn their daily bread, not by sufferance, but by the sweat of their brow, proud of their human dignity.

How was so much of this made possible in so short a time? The Government of Israel had urged that State of Israel Bonds should be put on sale in the United States, Canada, and the free countries of Latin America and Europe, and hoped that Jews everywhere should invest in those bonds so that Israel might become economically free.

What a difference I found in the port of Haifa this summer as compared to it on my other visits! No thousands of refugees waiting to be taken to Ma'araboths, but sheds filled with merchandise for export! Magnificent grapes and melons, comparable to those grown in countries with vineyards centuries old. Citrus juice for Africa, and phosphates for Japan. The paper bags used for shipping were no longer imported ones, but had been fashioned in Israeli Paper Mills from Canadian and Finnish pulp. There was Holy Water, too, in little containers like the jug which Rebecca had carried on her shoulder to the well. Ready for export, too, as well as on sale in Nazareth, Jerusalem, and in little Arab villages, were the prayer beads made from the pits of Israeli olives.

I shall not soon forget my visit to Camp Deborah, and my day with the girls taking their basic army training. Certainly all qualms regarding the endless dis-

Life: How Can We Measure It At The New Year?

BY RABBI MENDELL LEWITTES, LEADER OF THE ORTHODOX SYNAGOGUE, YOUNG ISRAEL OF MONTREAL

The dominant theme of our prayers on Rosh Hashanah is life. "Remember us unto Life," "Inscribe us in the Book of Life," are repeated again and again as we raise our voices heavenward in supplication on the New Year. And, indeed, life is a most precious gift, and we are bidden by our Torah to preserve it and prolong it at all times. "Ye shall keep My statutes which if a man do he shall live by them." (Lev. 18:5) says Scripture; whence our Sages infer that, with the exception of three basic laws of conduct without which life is meaningless, no law of the Torah may stand in the way of the preservation of life. Even the sanctity of the Sabbath is set aside when it interferes with the higher duty of preserving life.

In our modern civilization we find a curious ambivalence towards the importance of human life. On the one hand, we see the great strides that are being made by medical research in prolonging life. Certain discoveries of recent years, as for example that of penicillin, have extended life where in previous years death would have been certain. In the past half-century the normal span of life, what the insurance people call life-expectancy, has increased almost twenty years. And the search for biochemical weapons to combat the great killers, such as cancer and heart failure, goes on relentlessly. Where an individual life is in jeopardy, when someone is stricken with a rare disease that requires a scarce serum from some distant point, no stone is left unturned to make the life-giving serum available.

On the other hand, we are witnessing an alarming trend towards the cheapening of life. There isn't a day gone by without the newspapers recording another violent and premature snuffing out of life. It has been estimated that a homicide occurs once every forty minutes, every day in the year, in the United States. How often have we read about the son who deliberately kills his father because the latter refused him some request, or about the merchant who is shot in cold blood because he resisted a robbery. And on an even grander scale, has not our generation witnessed the crudest and cruelest disregard for life in the extermination policy of the

The Toronto Jewish Public Library Receives To Give

BY HILLEL DIAMOND, OF TORONTO, EXECUTIVE SECRETARY, JEWISH PUBLIC LIBRARY

The Toronto Jewish Public Library is necessarily the centre of inspiration and motivation for Toronto's Jewry. According to Louis Rosenberg, eminent research consultant and statistician to the Canadian Jewish Congress, the Jewish population of Metropolitan Toronto at the present time numbers approximately 74,500 Jews. The Library therefore has set for itself the task of functioning as the soul and the centre of initiative for Jewish educators, Zionists, social workers, community leaders, business men, artists, musicians, writers and men of science and technology.

The Library stands on the South-West corner of Harbord and Markham Streets, in a neighbourhood which is considered the maturest in length of settlement by Toronto Jews. The picturesque and mansion-like building, in which the Library is now housed, was once the home of the late Honourable Sir William Mulock, Postmaster General of Canada. Within the confines of the building there are housed well over 8,000 books in Yiddish; 1,000 books in Hebrew; and approximately 1,000 books of Judaica, in addition to a small library set aside for the children.

The Library as a matter of policy stresses mainly Hebrew and Yiddish and leaves the English part of the program to the entirely adequate Toronto Public Libraries system. It has two capable librarians, well versed in Hebrew, Yiddish, and English, who keep the Library open till ten o'clock nightly. The topics found on the shelves include the sciences, sociology, literature, poetry, drama, world travels, biographies, children's books, novels, and general diversified reading.

The spacious reading room attracts thousands of people each year, and no wonder, for here can be found current papers, periodicals, and news magazines from all over the world in all languages. On the second floor of the library building, is situated the auditorium with a built-in stage and seating over three hundred people.

Extra projects such as lectures, music appreciation, and study circles, are carried out independently of the library. In the past year, for example, an audio-visual program was inaugurated with the co-operation of Mrs. I. L. Seigel. This has been most attractive especially to the children. They also have a story-hour.

Music Appreciation programs, with books forming the basic background for material, have attracted a large following. A notable example was the presentation of Balshassar's Feast by this author and his wife, Tova Borodesky-Diamond. Lectures and symposiums continue through the full length of the year, with visiting notable authors being welcomed into our midst. Another interesting facet was the creation of an Israel Stamp Club, to study, discuss, and delve into the postal history of Israel. The membership of this group, which is the only one of its kind in Canada, numbers many prominent personalities, both Gentiles and Jews.

The Jewish Public Library of Toronto fulfils a special function each year during National Jewish Book month. Attractive book exhibits are arranged and interesting programs are designed to stimulate and create a new readership. Creating library resources is not easy and the Jewish Public Library of Toronto is not without its trouble and worries. The library takes its policy and direction from a board of directors comprised of prominent people from all walks of life, under the chairmanship of its president, Henry Paparnick, Q.C. A special council has also been created to serve as representation to the various agencies and communal groups of the city.

We cannot afford to ignore the claims of culture. There is so much catering to the physical needs in these modern days that the more important needs of the mind are in danger of being overlooked. A library plays an important part in cultural development and no community can afford to ignore this fact. Good books are a never ending source of refreshment and profit to all who have an adequate appreciation of their merits, and this Library is a place for enjoyment and instruction, the meeting of minds and the making of friendships. Art Among Jews

BY TERRY LIGHTMAN (MRS. J. B. LIGHTMAN), 4902 VICTORIA AVENUE, MONTREAL

(Editorial Note: The author studied art in Washington, D. C., of which city she is a native; in Paris and in Latin America, where as a painter, she developed her own form of constructive art, and where she exhibited under the auspices of the cultural attaches of the United States embassies, in Buenos Aires, Argentina; and in Montevideo, Uruguay, respectively.)

The complexity of Jewish life throughout the ages, with constant dispersion and loss of possessions, has not made for a history of acquisition of property. In most periods it has been one, rather, of transitional adjustment. As for art, the Second Commandment stood in the way of a full recognition of representational and plastic forms. There have been leaders in Jewish life, however, who have attempted so to interpret the Second Commandment as to encourage the use of the plastic arts in order to make for a better understanding of the artist and his creations of beauty. But only during periods of comparative peace, have our people turned to artistic expression in a continuous vein.

As early as the third century, c.e. a Babylonian teacher by the name of Rabbah, declared that: "a statue, if set up for decorative purposes, as may be the case in a large city, is not offensive. It is objectionable only in a village, where the populace is likely to worship the image."

In Neharden, in Babylonia, in the same century, a statue of the king was placed in the synagogue and there was no apparent objection. It appears that whenever the Jews found themselves in an atmosphere of tolerance, they were disposed to conform to general practice more readily.

From the third, through the sixth centuries c.e., paintings appeared on the walls of homes and synagogues. Mosaic pavements have been discovered in a number of old synagogues in Palestine and the Diaspora. There is the case of the wall paintings of the famous Dura-Europos Synagogue, excavated in 1932, in the locations of the ancient city of Dina-Europos, which lay between Damascus and Bagdad, somewhat to the north, on the right bank of the Euphrates River.

Here was to be found an inscription dated 245 of the Common Era. The building is highly decorated with numerous figures, which represent definite Biblical themes, for example: "Joseph and his Brethren"; "Ahasuerus and Esther"; "The Finding of Moses". As for the artists, we have no clue to their identity. The possibility, however, is that non-Jewish artists were employed. This Jewish community, at the time, enjoyed relative security. The Jewish wars with Rome were over.

As we encounter periods of security here and there, we find acquisitions of art treasures in the form of religious objects. The goldsmiths and silversmiths among Jews were well known for their beautiful creations of menorahs, esrog and spice boxes, candelabra, and Torah adornments. Many of these art objects were destroyed each time a new dispersion took place.

During the Renaissance, 14-16th centuries, Jews under the various European protectorates began to relax and to accept the expression of the times. Great art consisted of portraiture that had no real religious significance in the paintings of Leonardo da Vinci, Titian, Tintoretto and others who were following the new development among the Christian religious primitives with non-secular expression. These portraits were commissioned by princes, minor royalty, and wealthy merchants. The Jews in Italy at the time of the Renaissance also adopted the fashion in the art of their day, by developing a love of portraiture.

The well-known Rabbi, Leone Da Modena (1571-1648), in his work on Hebrew rites, emphasized the inhibition of the Jews with regard to graven images and then

My Wonderful Visit To Israel

BY HON. JAMES G. GARDINER, M.P., MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE OF CANADA

I must take this opportunity to thank the Jewish people in Canada, in Rome and in Israel for having taken such great interest in the fact that I had declared that I intended to visit Israel after attending the F.A.O. conference in Rome. The Ambassador from Israel here, Mr. Comay, came to my office and offered his services to arrange my trip. He was most helpful, particularly in making it possible for me to see Old Jerusalem.

The Israeli Ambassador at Rome put on a luncheon, to which he invited leading business men and officials of the government of Israel who were at F.A.O. They not only were hospitable but again were most helpful with suggestions as to what we might see.

When we arrived at Lydda airport, representatives of the government of Israel, the government of Britain, and the representatives of the Canadian Jewish Association at Jerusalem, Mr. and Mrs. Friedgut, were there to meet us. The next day after we returned from Old Jerusalem practically the whole government of Israel and their wives had us to dinner and informed us that so long as we were in the country we were to consider ourselves guests of the government of Israel.

In addition to all that, Mr. Sol Kanee, national vice-president of the Canadian Jewish Congress, ended a trade mission he was on in Africa to come from Rome to Israel with us. Since I returned I have had no end of suggestions from Jewish organizations to come and talk to them. Unfortunately, I was not well for a short time after I returned with the result that this will be my first talk on a week spent in Israel.

You might wonder why, among all the places I could have gone, I would go to Israel. There are more reasons than one. The first one is best expressed in the words of the American historian, Myers, in summing up his chapter on the Ancient Hebrews. He had just pointed out that Abraham, Moses, and Joshua had planted in the minds of the Hebrew people before 1,000 B.C., teachings which have influenced world developments to our day and that the Judges and Kings had carried on the development of those ideas as set down in the interesting stories of the Old Testament.

He followed that up with a story of the division of the children of Israel into two states, the kingdom of Israel and the kingdom of Judah, the first of which was destroyed in 722 B.C. by Assyria, and the second by the Babylonians in 586 B.C. The Hebrews were carried away from their ancient home 600 years before the doctrines of Christianity were taught. In summing it all up he says this:

"The Ancient Hebrews made little or no contribution to science. They produced no new order of architecture. In sculpture they did nothing; their religion forbade their making 'Graven Images'.

"Their mission was to make known the idea of God as a being, holy and just, and compassionate and loving, — as the Universal Father whose care is over no one people alone but over all peoples and all races — and to teach men that what he requires of them is that they shall do justice and practice righteousness.

"The lofty conception of God was the best element in the bequest which the Ancient Hebrews made to the younger Aryan world of Europe, and is largely what entitles them to the preeminent place they hold in the history of humanity."

My chief reason for wishing to see the descendants of the ancient Hebrews returning to the land of their fathers is that I think all Christendom owes a debt to the Hebrew race which can best be paid by seeing to it that, 2500 years after they were carried away into captivity, they are returned in considerable numbers to Zion and firmly established there.

My second reason is that the first job I had after obtaining a certificate to teach in the North West Territories, in 1905, was at Hirsch in the Jewish colony. My employers and pupils were just like those I saw in Israel in December, almost fifty years later. I have represented another colony of them at Lipton in the House of Commons since I came to Ottawa. Those settlements were composed of Jews who came from Russia, Austria, Germany, Rumania, and other countries just as do those who are settling in Israel. They left those countries for the same reason they are leaving now.

One reason why I feel at home in Montreal is because I meet so many of my Jewish friends from Saskatchewan. But my chief reason for going at present was that I wished to be able to compare their efforts to rehabilitate a country, much of which had been turned into a desert long ago, with what we are doing to rehabilitate parts of our own country which require similar treatment. I understand that quite a number of the Jews of Montreal in addition to paying taxes to rehabilitate lands on the prairies are purchasing bonds or making gifts to assist these young peo-

The Hebrew University Of Jerusalem: Instrument Of Benefit To Israel, Jew, And All Humanity

BY ALLAN BRONFMAN, OF MONTREAL, NATIONAL PRESIDENT, CANADIAN FRIENDS OF THE HEBREW UNIVERSITY

On the eve of another Rosh Hashanah, we naturally cast our gaze forward to the coming year and ask ourselves: what will the year 5715 mean and bring to the people of Israel and to World Jewry? Our hearts are filled with hope for still greater strides in the further construction and consolidation of the Jewish State, and a determination to take ever more vigorous steps in the forging of Jewish deeds and achievement, and in strengthening the Jewish renaissance of this wondrous era, our era of opportunity.

If there is one central force contributing to modern Jewish resurrection, a force for which we seek continuing strength and growth, and on which the tempo of Jewish creativity hinges heavily, it is the Hebrew University of Jerusalem. A mere glance at the incredible and unprecedented record attained by the Hebrew University since its modest inception in 1925, inspires us with ever growing pride in its accomplishments in behalf of Jewish living and the reconstruction of Israel.

When Israel's fight for freedom was upon us in 1948, the Hebrew University found itself trapped in the terrible and tumultuous death and din that was war. In one swift and merciless stroke our cherished buildings on Mount Scopus, our treasured equipment and material were cut off from us, and although we had and have the right to maintain and guard the premises on Mount Scopus, higher education and knowledge were for the moment doomed to an existence of apparent exile and isolation.

Knowing full well what a university could and must do for an infant State and for a people, who around the world had rallied for Jewish survival, our hearts were heavy with a feeling of intolerable loss. The mechanism, the machinery for producing the skilled and trained personnel, which could be the life-giving oxygen for the young State, had been cruelly plucked from our grasp.

It was in this dark hour that the embers of Jewish inventiveness and the spark of Jewish ingenuity were rekindled and refired. For the pace and the accomplishments of the Hebrew University stand today, despite a period pock-marked with the drab and dreary limitations of exile, as an inspiration to education and progress among Jews and mankind everywhere. In a crowded Jerusalem, a Jerusalem which to this day teems with tension and seethes with unrest, the Hebrew University has planted the seedlings of knowledge, has cultivated, with fervor and devotion, the young saplings of learning, and is, thus, giving to the Jewish State, the scientists, doctors, lawyers, teachers, agronomists, civil servants, the skilled people, it needs to become a self-sustaining, progressive country. And, not least of all, the University, exiled from its buildings, drew closer than ever before to the people.

The beginning of 5715 will mark a new milestone of progress for world Jewry's house of higher learning, for in Jerusalem a new, spacious and modern home for the Hebrew University is being designed for construction. The new year, too, will see even a greater number of new enrollments at the University, well over 3,300 students, students who, through determined scholastic effort, will in time find their place of productivity and satisfaction in Israel's expanding industry and agriculture. For, just as the prestige and the pride of the Jew throughout the world is dependent on the vitality and vivacity of a Jewish state, so is Israel's productivity and abundance dependent on the training of professionals who are to be her core, her very heartbeat.

So let us face the coming year with confidence; confidence that the Hebrew University shall continue to aid the development of Israel, and enhance and embellish the culture and enlightenment of its people everywhere. And recognizing the tremendous impact the Jewish people's house-of-higher-learning has on all of us, Canadian Jewry will strengthen its determination to bolster and broaden its interest in, and support of, this great and noble instrument which has been geared by destiny to benefit all humanity and whose brilliant future fate has cast in our lifetime.

"Car of the future" styling comes true in the wonderful General Motors cars you can buy today

General Motors continues to lead the style parade—with these brilliant examples of what the new style trend will be for the years ahead

Here are the smart new sweep of line—the low, sweet look—the exciting new expanse of backward-angled windshield glass—and a host of advanced new engineering features—that were found on GM's "dream cars" only a few short years ago.

But then are dreams no longer. Today they are real. For even as people dreamed with longing of these "cars of the future," the stylemakers and the decision-makers were busy on the tasks which turned them into a dazzling line of production models.

So, for your appreciative appraisal, we present to you the newest, smartest, and most advanced line of automobiles that has come to market in many a year.

Come see them, and we think you'll agree.

Want the best in Oil Heating? We can quickly install an IRON FIREMAN Vortex OIL BURNER

Let the Vortex oil burner cut your oil bills up to 30%

The whirling Vortex flame starts above the grate line, covering the hearth and sweeping the side walls of your furnace or boiler. Radiant heat penetrates the secondary heating surface with full intensity in the same manner as a coal fire, for which your coal furnace or boiler was designed, and saves as much as 30% on oil bills.

in your present furnace or boiler

without discomfort or inconvenience to you

● Yes, you can change to automatic oil heating —without discomfort or inconvenience to you. You can have an Iron Fireman Vortex oil burner installed in your present furnace or boiler in four hours or less. Then, with a touch of your finger you can set your thermostat for any day or night temperature you prefer, and the Iron Fireman Vortex oil burner will maintain it—automatically. Why not enjoy an abundance of uniform, healthful, low-cost heat THIS WINTER? Call us today for a free heating survey.

Your style-line starts at your bust-line

Good form is basic for style—that's why your "Perma-lift"® bra is so important. With a "Perma-lift" bra your bustline is smooth and young and firm—a must for today's fashions. The famous cushion insert, deftly fashioned into the base of each bra cup is utterly unlike any other bra support—does everything you expect a superb bra to do—will withstand countless washings and long wear.

You'll enjoy many more benefits in wearing "Perma-lift" brassieres than we claim for them. For beauty—for unsurpassed style and comfort ask for a "Perma-lift" bra—at your favourite corset department.

"Perma-lift" and "Shapely" are trademarks of A. Stein & Company, Limited

Butter one of my secrets of good cooking

Chef E. Lemieux,
Canadian National Railways, says:
"I was chef on the Royal Train during the Canadian tour of the then Princess Elizabeth. I used butter always in preparing the meals, for butter gives the best results. I don't consider it extravagant, because it imparts much better flavour to such things as French pastry and fried foods. Butter is one of my secrets of good cooking!"

Rich, golden Canadian butter makes many things taste extra-good. When you serve it to your family, you're giving them the best there is in natural flavour.

Butter is an important source of healthful food values, too.

AS MUTUAL LIFE'S NEW "60-65 COMMANDER"

LOOK! ALL YOUR PREMIUMS ARE RETURNED WHETHER YOU LIVE OR DIE!

THAT'S THE OUTSTANDING FEATURE OF THE "60-65 COMMANDER"

HERE'S HOW THIS NEW POLICY WORKS FOR YOUR ADVANTAGE:

If you live to age 65

you yourself will receive:—
(1) refund of all premiums you have paid over the years
plus
(2) all accumulated dividends.
Truly a substantial aid for your retirement!

If you should die before 65

your dependents will receive:—
(1) A monthly income until you would have reached 60
plus
(2) return of all premiums you had already paid in
plus
(3) all accumulated dividends.

You pay no premiums after you reach age 60.

ple in Israel to do the same thing. I hope I can convince you from what I saw that they are not wasting the money you have made available.

We left Jerusalem on Monday morning to see what was being done to make the desert bloom in the area known as the "Negev" of which Beersheba is the capital. Our first stop was at the farm of a young couple from Poland who were making a start on a ten-acre farm they hoped to own. They had an orange grove, some olive trees, some sheep, chickens and geese, and six Holstein cows, together with the young stock which goes with them. I learned from them that they earned about the same amount from their seven to ten-acre farms of irrigated land as we do in Eastern Canada from a hundred acres of unirrigated land, or in Western Canada from 120 acres of irrigated land.

After some questioning I learned this is partly because of the fruit they grow, oranges, olives, grapes and bananas, but mostly because they can harvest ten crops of alfalfa from good irrigated land in one year. This farm illustrated the type where the farmer is an individualist but markets through a co-operative. Their home was as comfortable a little cottage of four or five rooms as one could see in any farming area.

The next stop was near Haeret. We stopped to see them laying 66-inch pipe to carry water from the Yarkon river north of Tel-Aviv, down toward Beersheba. I found when I stood in the pipe my hat just touched the top. They are laying this pipe for a distance of over sixty miles right into the desert. A few miles further on at Muharaka we were taken under ground to see one of the most up-to-date pumping stations associated with the same system of water distribution as I have ever seen. The whole thing reminded me of the oil pipe lines on this continent. They claimed, and I think they were right, that water distributed onto good dry land would give better returns to more people than oil development.

They had the latest heavy equipment with which to lay the pipe line; they made the 66-inch pipe; they had the best pumping equipment which can be secured with telephone and radio stations to keep contact with all parts of the system. They were spending $7,000,000 of over $70,000,000 from North America on irrigation. I hope we can persuade some government or group of financiers to provide funds in certain parts of Canada with which to do as good a job.

We went on down to Urim directly west of Beersheba to visit another type of farm organization. This colony is a collective settlement. All the property is collectively owned and work in the settlement organized on a collective basis. Domestic and social services are provided communally. We visited this centre to meet their complete organization. They called in their staffs from all parts of the colony and served lunch in the common dining room. Among them were several Canadians. All the group were well trained for their work and most of them were particularly well educated. They had a thorough knowledge of the agricultural requirements of the area.

We had a delightful visit with them and then paid a short visit to Beersheba. The Mayor met us at the City Hall and accompanied us through the city. He was very proud of his housing projects. Those constructed early were much the same as one would see in cities of the Southern States. Those erected later were one-story two-apartment cottages well suited to the needs of the area. We were sorry it was too late to see the mining activities and the excavation work being carried on in the vicinity of the city.

We drove back to Tel-Aviv and just as the Commission were greeted by heavy rainfall at Outlook, Saskatchewan, when they were enquiring as to whether a dam should be built on the river, so we drove through a pelting thunder storm and were drenched getting into the Dan Hotel. We found the service in this modern hotel the equal of any in Canada. The next morning, Tuesday the 15th, we took off for Lake Tiberias, the ancient Sea of Galilee. We visited an agricultural training centre at Midrasha. It was similarly equipped to agricultural schools in Canada. Mrs. Gardiner visited the Children's Village "Hadassim", sponsored and maintained by the Canadian Federation and says I missed a great deal not being with her and that one of the most picturesque cities she had ever seen was Natanya on the Mediterranean nearby.

One of the most interesting experiences we had on the trip north was when our driver stopped before descending into the beautiful Valley of Jezreel to point out places of interest. I had not realized that so many important incidents in the development of the ancient Hebrew nation took place within such a limited area. We stood by the car on the side of a hill to the south of the valley and were shown the location of the Well of Harod where Gideon selected the three hundred with whom he destroyed the hosts of the Midianites. We were shown the site of Gilboa where Jonathan was slain and Saul and his armour-bearer fell upon their spears and died rather than be taken by the Philistines.

Our guide reminded us as we looked at the barren site of Gilboa that it was this mountain David had cursed when he said: "Ye Mountain of Gilboa, let there be no dew, neither let there be rain upon you . . . for there the shield of Saul is vilely cast away . . . as though he had not been anointed with oil."

We next visited Nazareth. We were met at the limits of the city by the military police and escorted to meet the military governor of the area at headquarters. The building was on a hill which commanded a view of the city. The important places we wished to see were pointed out to us. As soon as we had seen them we left for Tiberias where we had an appointment to meet the President, Mr. Ben-Zvi, and his wife. We left their presence with a feeling that the young Jews who come to Israel from all over the world were witnessing in the lives of these people and the ex-Prime Minister, Mr. Ben-Gurion, that kind of inspiration which builds nations and establishes beliefs in lasting ideals.

The hotel at Tiberias gave us service at lunch which added one more proof that this young nation is providing a hotel service equal to that of any country. Immediately after we took off for the settlement at Degania, founded in 1909 by Jews from Russia. It is a community operated in a similar manner to such farms in Russia. We were shown the dining-room where they had their meals together; and the nursery where the children were cared for through the day while their parents were working; and the living quarters, each building being occupied by a considerable number of families.

There were herds of cattle and flocks of sheep, as well as poultry, which were cared for by those assigned to that work. There were orange and olive groves, as well as vineyards, cared for by those specially trained to do so. The earnings of all these activities are pooled for the common good. In principle, this farm is organized on the same basis as that at Urim. The difference is that this is the oldest colony of the type in Israel and is operated by experts who have learned from experience. That at Urim is one of the newest at which those in charge are attempting to copy the success of their predecessors. If they do, they will have added to the comfort and contentment of many people.

After we left the community we viewed the irrigation works at the end of Lake Galilee and followed the road along the Jordan river south to Beisan. At Beisan we turned west to Afula. From there we turned south to Tel-Aviv. The whole route has been settled by Jewish immigrants to form an inviting countryside.

The 16th of December, the last day of our visit to Israel, turned out to be one of great interest. We spent it in the well-established area south and east of Tel-Aviv. This is a country of orange groves and vineyards. We spent most of the day at Rehovat where we visited the Agricultural Research Station, the Weismann Institute of Science, and a citrus fruit packing house. I am not going to describe them to you because to do so would be to picture in your minds the best institutions we have in this country for similar purposes. Everything in that area is a tribute to the great leader, Dr. Chaim Weizmann, the founder of the new state of Israel. These institutions were well-staffed, well-equipped, and doing a worthwhile service.

At Rishon le Zion, about half way back to Tel-Aviv, we visited the vaults built with the support of the Rothschild interests many years ago for the local co-operative. It was explained to us that although the cooling and aging devices were not the latest available, they did over the years, and still do, produce some of the best wine and brandy in the world. We returned to Tel-Aviv about five o'clock and were shown the city by the young men you had in Montréal who established the sightseeing service there.

That night they delivered us at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Itshak Rokach, at Herzlia. He is a member of the citrus marketing board. His brother, Israel Rokach, and his wife were there. The head of the Farmers' Federation, Mr. Rosson, and his wife were there, and Mr. and Mrs. Sachs. Mr. Sachs is one of the outstanding experts in the world on citrus grove development. We had a delicious dinner, a most interesting discussion of farming activities in Israel and Canada. They had all read considerably of our big wheat crops and would be most interested in buying our wheat if we could take their citrus fruits and wines.

On the morning of the 17th we drove to the airport at Lydda and about noon took off for Rome. Those who had represented the government of Israel in making our stay in Israel most delightful as well as helpful, and representatives of the British Embassy, were there to see us off. I wish to conclude by saying: These are the busiest group of people I have seen in any country since we had a migration of similar people to this country around the beginning of the century. Irrigation will be the salvation of their country. They have doubled the irrigated area in five years. Their government matches, in ability, courtesy to visitors, and experience, any I have met in any country.

I trust and pray they will succeed in planting at the centre of the ancient world a memorial in the form of a new Hebrew nation to the great contribution the Hebrew philosophy of life has made to the civilization of mankind.

RARE ITEMS IN U.S. JEWISH HISTORY TO BE AVAILABLE

The largest library ever assembled of source material on American Jewish history, consisting of documents, books and manuscripts, will be made available for study and display by the American Jewish Historical Society to schools, libraries and museums in communities throughout the U.S., Professor Salo Baron, of Columbia University, president of the Society, announced. He said that the library of more than 10,000 volumes and thousands of other items with sources in colonization, immigration, biography, naturalization, genealogy and the general contributions to Jews to American civilization "will become accessible as a central source of study during the celebration of the 300th anniversary of Jewish settlement in this country, beginning next week."

Rabbi Isidore S. Meyer said that the Library includes among its rare items the first book ever published by Harvard College, the Hebrew Grammar of Judah Monis, printed in 1735; first book of Prayers, printed in English in the U.S. for use on Jewish holidays, 1761; the first Hebrew text of Psalms published in the United States in Cambridge, Mass., 1809; and the first Hebrew-English prayer book published in America, 1826.

Highly valuable manuscripts in the library include: the marriage contract of Haym Salomon and Rachel Franks, dated 1777; a letter from George Walton, signer of the Declaration of Independence, requesting aid for Coshman Polock, a patriot refugee of Georgia, dated 1780; the original manuscript of a prayer for George Washington and the Continental Congress from the dedication exercises in 1782 of the Congregation Mikveh Israel, in Philadelphia; an offer of hospitality to Robert Morris, signer of the Declaration of Independence, 1776, by Benjamin Levy, of Baltimore; and a letter from Benjamin Franklin to his nephew, in 1777, expressing the hope that "our country will soon become great and glorious by being the asylum of the Oppress'd in Europe."

Canadian sandstone has been utilized extensively in the construction of many important public buildings in Canada. The rock occurs in a variety of colours, white, reddish brown, yellow and grey. Production in 1952 amounted to 219,000 tons.

THE KOSHER SALAD & COOKING OIL

For many years chefs, in all parts of Canada, have shown a preference for MAZOLA — connoisseurs of delicious salad dressings or mayonnaise appreciate the fine quality of Mazola. Mazola, made from sun-ripened corn, mixes easily with other necessary ingredients and imparts a distinctive and delightful flavour to salad dressings.

Mazola is unequalled for deep frying or sauteing and is most economical to use, as it can be used over and over again without carrying the odor or flavour of one food to another.

Have you tried the new 'Quick 'n' Sure' Pastry Method — for finer, flakier, more delicious pastry? Send for recipe folder to Jane Ashley, The Canada Starch Company Limited, P.O. Box 129, Montreal, P.Q.

for living. Why not get to know our own selves better? Think of all the precious time that is wasted in our effort to convince people that we are what we are really not. Take the pseudo-intellectual who strains at culture in order to impress his fellow man with his supposed erudition. What a waste of time! Consider the folks who try so hard to impress us with the nobility and aristocracy of their ancestry. What a waste of time! Think of the time that is wasted by people who exhibit their little trinkets and gadgets in order to gain status. What a waste!

Furthermore, there will be no time, if next year were to be our last, to hate or bear prejudices. Hating another person is a silly waste of precious time. Yet some people are so busy hating others, that they have no time to enjoy their own lives. Would it not be better for us to be more sympathetic and considerate? Would it not be better for us to share more of what we possess? Would it not be better for us to give our love unto others?

We are about to greet a New Year. The fact that it is new suggests improvement. The predictions of the future cannot be made with any certainty. The only certainty in life is that time is fixed for each one of us. How much is left, no one really knows. If you knew next year were to be your last, how would you live? Would you seek values? Would you acquire only those things that you really need? Would you perform those deeds that are timeless and eternal? One good resolution is to find self fulfillment by not wasting precious time. Live in deeds and not in years.

TWENTIETH CENTURY JEWISH WOMAN

ing and making her voice heard and her service counts in every country where she lives. How can I best describe her?

She differs from the Jewish woman of earlier centuries and yet I believe she has kept the finest qualities of the Jewish tradition of womanhood. Jewish women have always been "family women" whose lives centered on caring for their husbands, children, and homes. This, they still are, but with additions. For Jewish women have learned that to care best for their children they must take a lively interest in education, health and welfare. They have learned that they become better wives when they can share their husband's interests in work and in the activities of states and communities. And most important of all, they have learned that to protect their homes, they must protect their countries, that they must take their stand for the kind of laws that nourish the free, the tolerant and the understandi mind.

Perhaps no country shows vividly as Israel how important the new contribution Jewish wo men are making. Whether par icipating directly with their me folk in the physical up-building Israel, or whether helping to pl and service welfare work throu voluntary organizations such the new Israeli Council of Wom the women of Israel have dem strated the importance of the n woman.

Even in Morocco where pover ignorance, and restrictive custo have kept women in wasteful clusion for centuries, groups su as the Union of Jewish Women Rabat are helping to speed emancipation of women. Th look forward to seeing th work in education, child welfa nutrition and health create a n generation that will be able take its place proudly among progressive Jewish communities the world.

These are but two extreme amples of the twentieth cent Jewish woman. In each of 14 countries where Councils Jewish Women exist you can f her, for the very existence of Council pre-supposes this n woman. What is more through International, as the past pr dent Mrs. Moise Cahn, of New leans, Louisiana, pointed out, th women are travelling more, vi ing each other's countries sharing problems and soluti with ever-increasing frequenc

I was proud to be able to tell International of the work of Council women in Canada, of large contributions to both J ish and general welfare here; our program in geriatrics, men health, education, aid to Isr clubs for the elderly, help to migrants, and some fifty other activities of Council. these services have made Cou as an organization, and Cou women as individuals, respe not only by their fellow Jews by all Canadians.

We want to increase all of t services. To do so we need Council every Canadian Je woman who wants to be a "t tieth century Jewish wom who wants to work along side ish women everywhere in imp ing living standards and in spr ing the understanding and t ance without which there ca no peace.

Canadian Jewish women ha special role to play. Nourishe Jewish homes where the dignit the individual is respected, ed ed in a democracy where fre to be oneself is cherished, and dowed by virtue of their wo hood with a special capacity kindliness and sympathy, have much to contribute to mankind. I like to think through Council they can' that contribution most fully.

THE BRONFMAN COLLECTION OF CANADIANA

was established forty years ago to serve the cultural needs of your growing community. From the start, I am told, the Library was more than a repository for books and manuscripts.

There are, as we all know, two kinds of librarians. The one kind no doubt love and cherish the books they collect, but they seem never to be happy unless every book is in its right place on the shelves, untouched by any human hands except their own. The other kind of librarian harbours the strange notion that books are collected to be read. Such librarians encourage reading and encourage learning, and from what I can discover this institution has been fortunate enough to have this second kind of librarian.

I am told the Jewish Public Library was known almost from the start as the "People's University" and that the annual circulation of its 30,000 volumes is quite surprisingly high, and that the Library has been one of the main instruments for the preservation of knowledge of the Yiddish language and literature in the younger generation of the Jewish community.

It is characteristic and not, I believe, really surprising that Mr. Bronfman's magnificent benefaction which we are dedicating is only the most recent of many generous gifts to the Library. The Kaufman collection was acquired by one of the founders soon after the Library was established. The books and papers collected by the late Reuben Brainin, another of the founders, are alone a treasure house of materials relating to the history of Jewry in the past four score years. Other more recent benefactions I have been told about are the gifts of Mrs. H. R. Ressler, Mrs. Samuel Isaacs, Mrs. H. M. Caiserman and Mrs. J. I. Segal.

The tradition of collecting valuable books and papers and depositing them in the Library is so well established in the Jewish community of Montreal that I am sure it will never be allowed to die. And by upholding that tradition and keeping up-to-date the collection of Jewish Canadiana now being dedicated, the trustees of the Library will be maintaining a national institution for which, as the Minister responsible for the National Library, I wish to express the gratitude of all who are interested in the provision of worthy library facilities for the Canadian people.

I believe the founders and trustees of the Library have proceeded in the right way. What are essential to a library are books and periodicals and manuscripts; the building in which the books are stored is secondary. You put first things first. But even the secondary need was splendidly provided for a year ago when you moved into this new building which is so worthy in every way of the treasures it contains.

Of course, in creating this Library and in making it a national repository of Judaica Canadiana, you are fulfilling the proper destiny of a people who are known as "Ahm Hah-say-fer" which in the English translation from the Hebrew is rendered "The People of the Book".

It would be my hope that what you have accomplished in this institution for the Jewish community in Montreal and in Canada will be an inspiration to other elements in our population to preserve their own distinctive literary and cultural heritage as a part of the common national patrimony of our Canadian homeland. The view I have just expressed is one that few Canadians would quarrel with today; but we Canadians were not always so ready to cherish, or even to tolerate, the distinctive linguistic and religious and cultural heritages of the various elements that make up our population.

Many Canadians of Anglo-Saxon origin have been slow to learn that our French-speaking fellow citizens are really resolved to maintain their own language and their customs and their own way of life, and that they are better Canadians for doing so; and there are a few of our French-speaking fellow-citizens who, after two centuries, still seem to hope that their English-speaking fellow-citizens are not really here in Canada to stay.

But, happily, the vast majority of both English-speaking and French-speaking Canadians have accepted the fact that we are both here for good, and every year more and more of us come to believe that it is for our good that we are both here. Every year more and more Canadians come to realise that what is true of English and French, is true also of the other communities like yours which are making a distinctive contribution of their own to the new kind of nation we Canadians of all races are jointly engaged in building in the northern half of this continent.

It was Sir Wilfrid Laurier who gave us the vision of the kind of nation we Canadians were destined to be, and I should like to quote one passage in which he put this vision in eloquent phrases which I am happy, indeed, to echo. In a speech to the Acadians of Nova Scotia in August, 1908, Laurier said:

"Three years ago, when visiting England at the Queen's Jubilee, I had the privilege of visiting one of those marvels of Gothic architecture which the hand of [illegible] faith, had made a harmonious whole, in which granite, marble, oak and other materials were blended. This cathedral is the image of the nation that I hope to see Canada become. As long as I live, as long as I have the power to labour in the service of my country, I shall repel the idea of changing the nature of its different elements. I want the marble to remain the marble; I want the granite to remain the granite; I want the oak to remain the oak; I want the sturdy Scotchman to remain the Scotchman; I want the brainy Englishman to remain the Englishman; I want the warm-hearted Irishman to remain the Irishman; I want to take all these elements and build a nation that will be foremost amongst the great powers of the world."

It is a good thing for Canada that we are all learning that all the elements which make up our population can make a contribution to our Canadian civilization which we would be poorer not to have. But to those of us whose mother tongue is English or French, the literature of no other group but our own can have the same appeal as the historical and the legendary pre-historical literature of your Hebraic ancestors.

Obviously, I cannot speak with authority for those whose mother tongue and culture is French, though the Biblical and Hebraic influence on the literature of seventeenth century France and, consequently, upon French Canada, is apparent enough to anyone with the most superficial knowledge of the French literary classics. But I can speak with more authority of English Canadians.

By great good fortune, the translation of the Hebrew Bible into the English tongue was made in the age of Shakespeare, at the time when the genius of the English language burned most brightly; and it is an undoubted fact that the book which our English translators made of the great Hebrew writings has influenced every succeeding generation in every English-speaking country more than any writing which was ever composed originally in our own language. Now, I know that modern scholarship has found many faults with the fidelity of that translation. I am sure all of you have read, as I did, the fascinating article "On First Reading Genesis", by Edmund Wilson, which appeared in the New Ye er of May 15. Mr. Wilson's

Thirsty?

. . . TRY A PILSENER

When your unslaked throat feels like this there's a treat in store for you IF you keep Pilsener on hand! Gratefully you savour this clean refreshing beer as it trickles down that parched and dusty passage. Labatt's* Pilsener, of course, is the internationally famous brew, lighter than ale, drier than lager, ideal for quenching thirst. Call for it in your favourite hotel or tavern . . . keep a case at home—you never know when you'll have a thirst that deserves Pilsener. John Labatt Limited.

lish literature and English popular culture.

I have to confess that I have not kept up the regular daily reading of the Bible which was the custom in my own family in my youth; but I never go on a long journey, except when I am sure to stay in good hotels where I can rely on the Gideons, without taking with me the Bible as one of the books I want to have with me in case I should happen to find any considerable leisure on my hands.

I refer to this practice of mine, not as something remarkable, but rather as one small piece of evidence to support my general thesis that it is not possible for any literate Canadian, whatever his origin, and that it is certainly not possible for any Canadian brought up in the English tradition, to regard a Jewish Public Library as just another cultural institution belonging to fellow Canadians of different origins and another faith.

It is true that for most of us who are not Jews, the Jewish literature which has been written since the Bible is not well known, but we who are among the heirs of your great literary tradition cannot forget that your ancestors were producing the greatest of all Books when ours were savages in the forests of Europe, nor do we forget that the Book has become, in a translation which may be far from literal, but which is certainly very beautiful and profoundly moving, as much the heritage of our race as of yours. And it is the literature of your race which has given us the fundamentals of our religion and our conceptions of morality.

That is why I do not feel that I come here as a stranger but rather as one whose ancestors have earned some right to share in what you justly regard as the greatest literary tradition of the human race. With such a past as yours, it is not surprising that one of the greatest institutions of any Jewish community should be a library. It would be surprising if that were not so.

But with so great a past, the Jewish people must face an almost overwhelming temptation to live on their past. The quality and the quantity of the literary work of the Jewish community in every country where one exists is the most convincing evidence that you have succeeded, instead, in maintaining the creative spirit in your race from which mankind has already profited so richly.

I am sure that the Jewish people in the new world feel that they are in large measure the trustees of the creative spirit of their race. The tragic years throughout which the old world has recently passed have been particularly tragic for the Jewish people of the old world. Of these horrors I do not speak as a stranger. Like so many who were near and dear to you, my own brother was put to death in a Nazi concentration camp.

But for the Jewish people the tragedy of these years have comprehended the destruction of ancient seats of learning in the old world, and today I believe many of the greatest theological seminaries and other seats of Hebrew learning are on this continent. And you in this community have nurtured and cherished these institutions. I believe it is a particular source of pride that a Canadian edition of the Talmud was published in Montreal by Mr. Wolofsky in the early twenties.

Where so many have contributed, it would be invidious to select the literary work of individual Jewish Canadians for special mention, particularly on this occasion when we are dedicating this collection of the written works of all Jewish Canadians. But I believe this act of piety in seeking to preserve everything the Jewish people have achieved in written form in Canada will be a stimulus to still further achievement.

It is because of my confident anticipation that this ceremony marks the in-gathering of what I am convinced are only the first fruits of the creative genius of the Jewish community in Canada that I am proud, indeed, to have been associated with the dedication of the Bronfman Collection of Jewish Canadiana to the service of your community, of your city and of our country.

whether honour certificates from Reform organisations should be accepted, the chairman, Cantor Nathan Mendelson, of Montreal, replied in the following words: "In principle we have absolutely no opposition to accepting honour certificates from other cantorial bodies; just as a graduate of one University is not barred from accepting honours from another academic institution. We have above all to be loyal to our three cardinal aims: our holy work (Avodath Hakodesh) must be directed along the lines of correctness in behaviour (Derekh yeshara); in prayer (Tefila yeshara); and in music (Shira yeshara)."

It is obvious that only through true harmonious co-operation on our part or the sake of the synagogue and its holy work, will our "Mikdashe Meat" regain their crown of holiness as in days before.

The climax of the convention was reached on the third day which was devoted to cantorial studies, consisting of several educational seminars conducted by renowned experts in their respective fields. Of utmost interest were the two instructive lectures given by Rabbi Israel Goldfarb, of Congregation Anshe Emes, in Brooklyn, N. Y., and by Dr. Moshe Zucker, instructor in Rabbinics at the Cantors' Institute, and instructor in Bible at the Teachers' Seminary.

The first speaker gave an analysis of the Hazanic styles of Cantors Kwartin, Roitman, and Rosenblat whose liturgic masterpieces will always be outstanding examples in the treasury of Hazanut of past liturgical masters and creative minds, which have enriched our synagogue music. The second lecturer analyzed with sharp details of intensive investigation the great importance of the laws of prayer and the obligatory duties of the "shaliah zibur".

These interesting lectures were received with great entnusiasm and were followed by vivid discussions in which the following delegates took part: Prof. S. G. Braslawsky, musical director of Temple Mishkan Tfilah, in Boston; eminent musicologue, Gershon Efros, of Perth Amboy, N. J.; Cantor David Chasman, of Malden, Mass.; Cantor Jacob Barkin, of Washington, D. C., and Cantor Nathan Katzman, of Hollywood Temple Beth-El, in Hollywood, Cal.

Of equal importance were the lengthy lectures given that same day on specific Hazanic topics by two leading personalities of the Cantors' Assembly: Cantor Max Wohlberg, instructor in Hazanut at the Cantors' Institute; and Cantor Samuel Rosenbaum, of Temple Beth-El, in Rochester, N. Y. Rev. Wohlberg reviewed the musical modes of the Ashkenazim and their usage; Rev. Rosenbaum lectured on the musical functio of the cantor in the synagogue.

Of outstanding interest was discussion about "The Cantors' stitute Of The Seminary In lation To The Cantors' Assemb Of America" with the particip tion of Dr. Bernard Mandelbau Dean of Students, at the Jew Theological Seminary of Ameri Rabbi Joel S. Geffen, director field activities and commun education of the Seminary; Dr. Hugo Weisgall, faculty cha man, Cantors' Institute.

In summing up it can be s that the impression left by convention was most exalted impressive. It is indeed a m satisfactory situation, according the opinion of most of the d gates, that radical improveme have taken place amidst the c torial ranks. Due to the reb of the State of Israel a new tional religious spirit has been vived which has had its influe also on the cantorial ranks induced a stronger creative sp in the field of our liturgical mu

LIFE: HOW CAN WE MEASURE IT AT THE NEW YEAR?

Nazis? The individual human life could not mean very much if the civilized world gave such faint protest at the mass murder of six million.

The instruments of war that have been developed recently lead to a still further cheapening of life. These are weapons of mass destruction capable of wiping out large cities in one blow, sending the guiltless as well as the guilty to their horrible doom. This disregard of life is one of the primary characteristics of totalitarianism. In such a system, lives of nonconformists are worthless, subject at any moment to the whim of the tyrant in power. For this reason alone, for its wanton and brutal attitude towards life, must totalitarianism be contained on all fronts and its expansion halted.

If Rosh Hashanah underscores the importance of life for each individual, it also makes us reflect upon the meaning of life. If life is so precious, we must know what makes it so. If we must strain every resource in order to preserve life, we must make it worthy of such effort. We must know what makes life the divine blessing for which we implore our Creator.

Some apply the yardstick of time to life. They measure life by the calendar. If man lives another year, his life is worth that much more. The man who lives longest is to them the man most blessed. Life is valuable to such people regardless of its content. They pray for an extension of their mundane existence, little caring what they are going to do once their prayer is granted. But such existence, purposeless and empty, cannot consecrate life and make it precious in our eyes. To reverse the present trend towards the cheapening of life, to make us aware of its sanctity and to guard more faithfully against its wanton destruction we must be aware of the high purpose of human life.

We must remember that time itself is elastic. The years that pass by, and Rosh Hashanah is the great reminder how swiftly they do pass by, "as a shadow that passeth and as a dream that flieth away", can be crowded with eventful deeds or become an empty shell. Our prayer book states, "Who is not remembered on this day? For the record of all deeds cometh before Thee." The years are like a vessel. We can either fill them with love and understanding and achievement, or let them pass into the oblivion of nothingness. "Teach us to number our days, that we bring a heart of understanding," says the Psalmist when he reflects upon the swift passing of the years.

The world is under an illusion that time itself will solve all our problems. "Give us time," said the Western World, "time is on our side. We will solve the problem of the menace of Communism by building up our armaments in a period of three or four years, and thus relieve the free world from the threat of Communist aggression." That period has elapsed, the armaments have been built; but we are no nearer the solution to our problem because we have failed to bring the heart of understanding that would seal the breach between two opposing worlds. We have been granted an extension of life, the dreaded Atomic War has not yet come to pass. The world must utilize every moment of that extension to develop the means of understanding and not trust to time alone to solve our problems.

What is true of international affairs is equally true of our personal affairs. There is a popular Hebrew saying, "What common sense will not do, time will do," leading people to believe that the passing of time alone without the application of common sense and proper understanding will solve their problems. If a child is wayward and exhibits anti-social tendencies, some parents say, "Leave him alone; he will grow up and everything will be all right." But everything will not be all right; in fact, everything will be worse, if the proper measures of instruction and guidance are not taken while the child grows up.

"Time heals all wounds," is another popular saying which can be misleading. For when we suffer a grievious loss it is not time alone that heals the wound, but the better understanding of what that loss should mean to us and how it should affect our lives. That is why there are certain individuals who never recover from a loss and who become pathological mourners, always grieving and bemoaning their fate.

Consider the case of the person who, by careless word or malicious act, has hurt another and then says to himself, "I'll forget about it. I'm sure that in the course of time the hurt will disappear and the injured party will also forget about it." But without sincere apology and positive attempt to remove misunderstanding, the hurt will grow and the injured party will bear increasing resentment. That is why our Sages say, "In offenses committed between one person and another, Yom Kippur does not make atonement until the guilty party effects a reconciliation with the aggrieved party." One Yom Kippur and two and three may pass, but the man who treated his neighbor unkindly or the husband who injured his wife's feelings or the child who was unjust to his parent will not reestablish a relationship of love unless he makes the proper gestures of regret and apology.

There are many who say, and even if they don't say it, they conduct themselves as if it were their credo, "Money is the measure of all things, of life itself." To them life is worthwhile if it brings an increase in material possessions. But, surely, if they were to reflect they would realize that we cannot evaluate a man's life by the amount of money he owns. No sensible person would say that the life of a poor man is less valuable, less worthy of preservation, than that of a rich man.

Many of the greatest men living, who made invaluable contributions to the welfare of humankind were poor in a material sense. Th spiritual giants of the earth whose teachings enriched and in spired numberless followers spurned material possessions an contented themselves with th barest necessities. Why, therefore do so many of us seem to h praying for only one kind of life a life of material plenty? Whe money becomes the purpose an criterion of life, life become cheaper and cheaper, as the re ord of modern crime will prov

Perhaps all of us will agree tha the true yardstick of life is hap piness. If life is happy then is worthwhile; if it is unhapp then it is of little value. Whe we pray "Remember us for Life we mean a happy life. It is cha acteristic that the tradition Rosh Hashanah greetin "L'shanah Tovah Tikasevu" is n translated literally "May you b inscribed for a Good Year" b "for a Happy Year." It is true that the classical philosophers have agreed that the "summum bonum", the highest good, is happiness. But no two philosophers have exactly agreed what constitutes happiness. To most of us, happiness and pleasure are identical. If we are able to indulge all our appetites, even at the expense of moral and religious ideals, we are happy. To some, happiness is contentment. If we are content to remain as we are, if we are satisfied with the status quo, if we experience no want, we assume that our life is worthwhile. If ignorance is bliss, we happily remain ignorant, fearful lest some additional knowledge or insight may stir us out of our quiescence.

Judaism does not look upon happiness as the "summum bonum" of life, nor is its conception of happiness that of the average person. Judaism does not say that life is worthwhile only if it is tranquil and undisturbed and accompanied with a feeling of satiety. On the contrary, life becomes more precious as we realize how short we are of its ultimate goal and how wanting we are in its true blessings. The greatest teachers of mankind, the Hebrew prophets, were thoroughly unhappy, unhappy at the state of affairs which surrounded them and at the role of chastisers into which they were cast. They were not content with the status quo but were disturbed about it; and thus they burst forth into those eternally reverberating pronouncements about ethical conduct and social justice.

Prophet and Psalmist speak of the happy man. "Happy is the man who puts his trust in the Lord," says Jeremiah. "Happy is the man that hath not walked in the counsel of the wicked . . . But his delight is in the law of the Lord," is the opening verse of the Book of Psalms, setting forth the true concept of happiness for man. Such a happiness is not contentment and satisfaction, for a man whose delight is in the law of the Lord is never satisfied with his present understanding of the law but is constantly seeking to improve it. The man who puts his trust in the Lord is constantly seeking to become more worthy of His divine grace.

Here we have the clue to the true measure of life, growth in the understanding of the divine law and maturing in the following of the ways of the Lord. To truly live, we must grow mentally and spiritually. On Rosh Hashanah, when we mark the passing of an old year, we must ask ourselves the question: Have I become a year wiser and better, have I developed morally and ethically? And when we pray for another year of life, let us pray that life may bring with it greater understanding of and sincere devotion to the ideals of our faith.

ART AMONG JEWS

appended his work with this notation: "But in Italy there are many who have freed themselves from this restriction and have paintings and portraits in their homes, although avoiding works of sculpture, both in relief and in the round". Jews in Italy during this period were relatively free from stress, and were able to conduct their affairs as all other citizens.

With the edicts of expulsion of Jews from Spain and Portugal in the 14th and 15th centuries, and their subsequent immigration to Holland, the Sephardi community that had consisted of Marranos living as Christians, had been constantly anxious to avoid giving any ground for suspicion as to their true feelings toward Judaism. We have every reason to believe that they adorned their homes in exactly the same fashion as did their neighbors, with paintings that were of a religious nature. According to some unpublished studies of Max Nordau, El Greco, one of the greatest Spanish artists, in the 16th century, was a real friend of the Marrano group and he, too, perhaps, was of Jewish origin, although this has never been verified.

Many of these immigrants were men of professional standing and wealth, and although they found a haven of refuge among the Dutch, they themselves, when they could openly practice the tenets of Judaism, became intolerant of any liberal thinking. We thus have the excommunication of Baruch Spinoza, the greatest of all philosophers of that day, although there were others of less importance. But with all that, many of them accepted portraiture as an adornment in the home and as a manifestation of their success.

Rembrandt, who lived in the Jewish section of Amsterdam, did many commissioned portraits of Sephardi Jews. Among his subjects were Rabbi Manasseh ben Israel, who, through negotiations with Cromwell, helped open the gates of England to the re-immigration of Jews there; Dr. Ephraim Bonus a leading physician; and also the daughter of Diego d'Andrada. About one-fifth of the Rembrandt portraits were those done of Jews. There were also other Dutch artists commissioned by members of the Sephardi community.

These Jews lived freely among their Christian neighbors without the stigma of being outcasts. In Holland they could clothe themselves in the accepted fashion of the day, go and come wherever they chose, live in any district, and attend the schools. As a new group they chose to live close together, and it was in this Jewish neighborhood that Rembrandt lived and did his portraiture work for many years.

The Jews who had come to Holland from Germany and Poland for a breath of freedom, did not have the same interest in the arts as did their Sephardi cousins. There was, also, of course, the matter of economic capacity that differentiated one group from the other. The portraits of East-European Jews by Rembrandt were not commissioned by them but were executed by the master as preliminary studies for larger canvasses. These Jews dressed differently, and observed ingrained habits of their previous ghettos which it would take several generations to throw off. Even the very dress of the Polish Jew, heavy and coarse garments, and fur caps, so unsuited to the mild climate of Holland, persisted for many years.

The next major period of emancipation occurred after the Napoleonic wars. And now began the development and taste of modern-day Jewish collectors, dealers, and artists.

With the periods of immigration and revolution during the 18th and 19th centuries there was constant movement and upheaval so that the arts suffered. Only with the advent of Queen Victoria in England did a feeling of relative security set in. The world began to develop wider horizons and subsequently the Jewish communities of the western world began to develop as an integrated part of the surrounding country. The strange dress began to disappear. Reform Judaism as a religious philosophy began to develop. The arts were given a proper place in a broader creative sense. Jews began to work in sculpture, painting, music, and dance.

Sir Joseph Duveen and Georges Wildenstein have become names known to all art lovers. Duveen had an unusual ability to recognize value and collected with an eye to philanthropy as well as to good sound business. His purchases and sales were the basis for the famous Mellon collection which now forms the nucleus of the National Gallery of Art in the United States in its national capitol. His own contributions to the National Gallery of British art won a baronetcy for him in 1927. A dramatization of his life is now being written for the stage and film.

The name Wildenstein is synonymous with dependability in art dealer circles. Due to anti-Jewish attitudes during World War II, the Wildenstein family opened branch galleries in New York and Buenos Aires. They have been responsible for outstanding purchases in famous collections that have in turn been contributed to various galleries.

Among collectors and philanthropists, we have Adolph Lewisohn, the Guggenheim family, A Levy and the Rosenwald fam the late Jacob Epstein, of B more, whose collection, includ statuary by the British Je sculptor of the same name, housed at the Baltimore Mus of Fine Arts along with tha the Cone sisters, and many pressionist and contemporary lections. ISRAEL, A LIVING LAND FOR WORK AND SONG cussions I had heard about women in the Israeli Army were shattered. Every girl, no matter in what country she lives, should be prepared for her future life as the girls are in Israeli's Army. I saw them drilling and making preparations for self-defense, but the feminine touches on the table and the serving of meals were all part of army instruction. I made friends with a little girl, born of Polish parents, and only twenty years of age, who had just become engaged, and she talked about how her training was preparing her for her married life as a citizen of Israel.

Unforgettable was my reaction to standing in the yards of the Yuval Gad Pipe Factory, whose workers come from 27 different countries. They watched our group of women wending our way in and out of the huge pipes, and across piles of steel which had been imported from Bethlehem in the U.S.A. As we watched these men, Yemenites and Iraqis and Europeans from many different countries, roll and weld that steel, we understood the real significance of the phrase, "The Melting Pot". Then we saw those enormous pipes being laid somewhere deep in the Negev, at the little Moshav "Rennen", which is the Nachlot in my name.

I found in the Negev, too, a group of Egyptian Jews from the ghetto of Cairo, as fanatic in their belief as Karaites as in their determination to increase their work as citizens in this new state. Here were 42 families, with 96 children and one pair of twins. All they wanted was to raise more cotton, more hemp, and ever more tobacco. There, where the sprinkling of their crops through the water system was made possible by Israel Bond dollars, they were finding happiness and building a new life.

In all the 120-degree heat of S'dom, 1,300 feet below sea level, we discovered the fallacy of the legend that Lot's wife had turned back to look and had become a pillar of salt. Certainly, in our 20th century pilgrimage, our group of American women with me, the one Canadian, turned ourselves around and around, dancing American and Israeli dances, but no pillars of salt did we become. We could only watch with amazement the vast quantities of potash coming up from the Dead Sea, and the string of trucks carrying it away for export to other countries of the world.

Aviation today is in the forefront of all governments, and the aviation plant at Bedek which we visited is as modern as any plant I have seen in Canada, from the office, with its IBM bookkeeping system, to the equipment for reconditioning planes for export. I crawled into a Spitfire plane that was being prepared for Burma, painted the most beautiful shade of blue, a blue to match the brightest sky.

I visited Beersheba and wanted to see the trees I had planted in 1949, designating that this was the land to be reclaimed with the help of Canadian Jewry. But, lo and behold, in place of a grove, there were houses, homes waiting for the new immigrants on their way to Israel. How vividly I recalled this housing development when I went to Shar Aliyah, the reception camp at Haifa. In 1951, this camp had been swarming with people for whom there were no homes, and now there were 1,200 newcomers from North Africa and from India, for whom places in Beersheba were ready and waiting. Among the Bnai Israel Jews of India there were precision workers who would be put to work in the Bedek Aviation Plant.

From early morning till past midnight, on the highways and byways of this "Living Land", I toured on roads equal to the finest in Canada. I visited every nook and corner, went into mines and caves, all showing the influence of capital supplied by the men and women of the free world through investment in State of Israel Bonds. Everywhere the people are eager for learning and life. Although they are aware of the grave responsibility in having unfriendly neighbors on their borders, these people of Israel still go about their work with song and prayer, determined that Israel will remain a "Living Land" forever.

Therefore a great responsibility rests upon the Jews of the free world, who in their own way of life have reached heights of great material comfort. It is we who must pause now and give thought that while Zeddakah, philanthropy, must always be righteous, we must think of Israel as a developing country in need of capital to make it economically sound and secure. We must resolve that these people of the Book, these people of the "Living Land" of Israel shall take their rightful place among the great democratic nations of the world.

Having yielded a record crop this year, Israel's citrus industry is already mapping plans to expedite the handling of an even larger crop next year. With the yield in most orchards amounting to more than 400 cases per acre, the industry will utilize Israel Bond capital to establish large central packing stations in time for next year. The new installations will be designed to improve and speed up packing operations, thereby saving currency and at the same time ensuring the best packing methods for export of the fruit.

THE BETHESDA-CHEVY CHASE JEWISH COMMUNITY GROUP:

smaller BCC group had believed it could carry over its aims and philosophy to the new institution but it was mistaken. It was engulfed by the new organization which rapidly became a typical Center. Another cause of dissatisfaction was the acceptance by the Center of funds from the nonsectarian Community Chest of greater Washington.

Furthermore, many members of the original BCC group missed the spirit of the older organization. They had been attracted by the independence, experimental approach and intimacy of the original group and missed these qualities in the new institution. Consequently some of the members decided to undertake the difficult task of rebuilding the former organization.

By 1950 the group had expanded to fifty families again. In that year the experiment of having a full-time Rabbi was tried, largely because of a determined minority. Many members had misgivings, since from the start the group had stressed evolution of policy by the membership itself and had avoided domination by a single person, either rabbi, social worker, or financial angel.

During this year there was much soul-searching, both on the part of individual members and the group as a whole over the issue of becoming a more conventional official religious congregation. In the following year (1950), those who had decided on a religious congregation split off to form the Beth-El Congregation. About this time also a Reform congregation (Temple Emanuel) arose in Montgomery County.

As a result of the schism in the midseason of 1951, the BCC group was left with eighteen families. Its original ideals and purposes sustained the group, however; its program continued. Currently the membership comprises about thirty families. At present the Beth-El Congregation comprises about seventy families; Temple Emanuel about one hundred; and the Montgomery County Jewish Community Center, approximately five hundred.

What kept this group going stubbornly despite the painful episodes of alternate growth and schism? Why was it not content to disappear quietly into the conventional communities? The answer must lie in the characteristics of the individual members.

The group is composed of persons whose vocations require intellection. They are scientists, journalists, economists, physicians, attorneys, and businessmen. It has become their nature to question, examine and weigh principles and ideas which others accept unthinkingly. Being of i dependent mind, they are not n cessarily satisfied with existi patterns and seek to impro them if found wanting. They ha come from various parts of t United States and Canada. the pursuit of their career, ma had lived in different geograph areas before settling in Was ington. They thus brought to t group a rich and varied bac ground in customs, education a experience.

Many worked for Federal Age cies and were therefore of mode means. This necessarily impos certain limitations on the a ivities of the group. But in ru ning the affairs of the organiz tion, they preferred acceptance such restrictions to domination wealthy patrons whose price often control of policy. Autho tarian control of their intellectu processes is equally repugnant them.

This spirit of independence milarly pervades the grou aims and operations. Our ch purpose is to take the best Judaism and make it meaningf for the modern generation. We a continually studying and evalu ing the teachings of our anc tors in a search for the moral v lues which supported them in th trials, hoping to find the way life which will best sustain o children and ourselves.

Stress is laid on active pa icipation by members and not leadership imposed from abo For this reason, and also becau we prefer an experimental a proach, we have been reluctant have a full-time spiritual leade Instead, the group relies on a exploits the accomplishments a latent talents of the membe themselves. Old methods are trie some are retained, others are m dified or discarded. New modes operation are also critically te ed. But the criteria used are n oldness or newness but sound v lues for everyday living in a co plex society.

This emphasis on experiment approach and on active shari of responsibility by the laity is radical departure from our a cestral ways. On the contrary, is in the best traditions of Juda ism, a religion which evolved a changed through the ages to me the varying needs of the people different times. the operation of the Sunday School our most important function. Classes are held in the local high school. The majority of teachers have been the parents themselves, although we also have paid teachers and consultants recruited from outside the membership. We prefer to have our own members as teachers. The children are proud of their parents' participation and thus identify themselves more readily with the groups' aims and activities. Some parent-teachers have had pedagogic experience; many are well-grounded in the history and religious philosophy of Judaism; all are interested.

The curriculum has been built up over the years. It is evaluated periodically and improvements are made. The curriculum may be crystallized from time to time but never fossilized. For example, two years ago when some parents desired further improvements in the curriculum, a discussion group was set up to investigate the problem. This group met weekly for several months and discussed subject matter and teaching techniques as well as attributes we hoped to bring out in our children and values we desired to give them. The group made recommendations and as a result one of our members revised and rewrote the curriculum.

The main objectives of the School are: (1) extract and transmit the meaning of our traditions and teachings; (2) teach Judaism as a way of life; and (3) develop in the children an appreciation of, and pride in, the contributions which Judaism has made to civilized people through the ages. Ritual robbed of understanding and meaning has no interest for us. We have no room for fusty ideas.

The curriculum for children through age eleven has been systematized fairly well, requiring only periodic revision. But special problems arise in the case of older children. We have tried to meet their peculiar needs with a flexible program. Boys who wish to prepare for Bar-Mitzvah are given special classes. Other children aged twelve and thirteen are put in a separate unit, which is run as a discussion group instead of a more formal, didactic class.

Round-table discussions by parents and children are held. The children are encouraged to express themselves freely. Sometimes the subjects range far afield but we rely on the skill of the parents to maintain unity of theme and purpose. Freedom without anarchy is our goal. In our experience, a bright adolescent won't be lectured at; he's more than apt to turn into a recalcitrant pupil. As a discussor on equal terms with others, however, he may open his mind to his fellows' viewpoints, even his parents'!

A similar grouping is made of youngsters aged fourteen to fifteen, but here they are given even more responsibility and authority. Indeed, they run their own affairs. They have dropped the name "Teen-Age Group" (suggested by the parents) for one of their own chosing "Young Adults", a consummation devoutly to be wished. They elect their own officers, and determine and execute policies in true democratic fashion. Discussion groups are held as before, but social activities now loom large. The parents help out as requested. A small committee of mothers has the difficult task of advising and satisfying both the "Young Adults" and the "Old Adults."

Our religious practices come closest to those of Conservative Judaism. We observe the High Holydays and celebrate the major festivals. In our religious services we again emphasize full participation by members; all functions are performed by lay persons. We strive for a dignified and friendly atmosphere; our services have the air of a family festival.

Our observance of last year's High Holydays will illustrate our manner of doing things. The religious committee, consisting of an economist, geologist, and physician, made complete arrangements for the program. Silverstein's modern prayer book was used. Readings in Hebrew and English were selected and apportioned among members. The chairman of the committee acted as the chief reader; he also chanted the traditional passages from the Torah in Hebrew with the true Nigun. At intervals he would blend into the services a historical sketch or an explanation of a prayer, at times for the benefit of the children, at times for the adults.

Another member sang the traditional Cantor's Kiddush with as much spirit, if not skill, as a professional Cantor. Many members took their turn as Reader, and recited the prayers either alone or responsively with the group. The children served as ushers and helped with the unveiling of the Ark and the carrying of the Torah.

As part of the services on Yom Kippur Eve we had a recorded rendition of Kol Nidrei sung by Jan Peerce. No one was shocked; the sacred music added greatly to the beauty of the services. No charge was made for the services either to members or guests; instead, a family could contribute a prayer book to build up our library.

Our festivals are celebrated by the entire group, integrating the roles of the parents and children. The children prepare themselves in Sunday School and the parents work out their parts in special meetings. In last year's Purim celebration a common custom was reversed when the children watched a Purim Play presented by their parents dressed as Sunday School pupils! We got no bids from Hollywood talent scouts but enough curtain-calls to know we had pleased our youthful more-than-critical audience, an accolade much more difficult to attain.

At Passover, our Community Seder was a happy family ceremony significant in its spiritual connotations. The entire supper was prepared in traditional style from soup (knedlach) to nuts (haroshes). Again the religious committee selected the readings and arranged the program. The observance, led by one of the group, began with a brief, dramatic sketch of the historical background of the Exodus and the spiritual significance of the struggle for freedom. The children asked the Four Questions and the parents shared the readings.

An activity which has become increasingly popular with both members and guests alike is the Friday Night Discussion Group. This function is held on alternate Fridays in place of regular religious services. Topics deal primarily with religion and philosophy. The group aims at working out a philosophy of religion for the modern Jew. Non-members rival members in attendance. Guest discussors have included, among others, philosophers, rabbis, and a well-known Christian authority on the Old Testament.

Last year the chief topics were the Book of Job, Ecclesiastes, Ethics of the Fathers, excerpts from Plato, and the newly-published collection of Jewish Letters put out by the Jewish Publication Society. There is no need at these sessions to stimulate discussion by artifice; if anything, it is the articulateness which raises problems at times.

A more conventional function is our Forum series, which consists of a number of presentations by guest speakers, followed by discussion. Topics are generally, but not exclusively, of Jewish content. Social gatherings, such as home parties, picnics, square dances, theater parties, musical evenings, round out the program of activities.

In such an assemblage of individualistic, independent-minded persons differences of opinion are bound to occur. They do. Can one imagine a Jewish organization where unanimity prevails? We work out our problems, and we have many of them, through discussion. Even we are amazed at the degree of harmony achieved!

Economic activity has expanded rapidly since the war in both Canada and the United States. Physical output, as measured by gross national product in constant dollars, was 34% higher in Canada in 1953 than in 1946, while the increase in the U.S. over the same period amounted to 29%. From mid-1953 to the end of the first quarter this year there has been a decline of about 2% in this country and 4% in the U.S.

MARRIAGES

HANDELMAN-ZUNENSHINE

The marriage of Miss Esther Zunenshine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Zunenshine, 4165 St. Dominique Street, to Saul Handelman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herry Handelman, 4617 Esplanade Avenue, took place on August 29, at half-past six o'clock, at Adath Israel Congregation, Rabbi Charles Bender officiating, assisted by Cantor E. Goldberger and Reverend A. Mandelcorn. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. Her gown of white satin had a wide, scooped neckline, with seed-pearl beading; long sleeves; and a tight-fitting bodice. The skirt had a panel of pleating, cut to show the tulle skirt; and a train with seed-pearl beading. Her crown of pearl-beading was combined with a fingertip veil of tulle illusion, and she carried a bible with two orchids. Miss Elaine Isenberg, cousin of the bride, of Philadelphia, Pa., was maid of honour. She was in an ankle-length gown of pale blue tulle and taffeta, and carried pink roses. The junior bridesmaids were Misses Nancy Handelman, sister of the groom; and Paula Beth (Penny) Zunenshine, niece of the bride. The former was dressed in a green ankle-length gown of tulle and taffeta; with a Juliet cap; and a nosegay of red, blue, and pink flowers; and the latter, in a pink organdy gown, and cap; and a nosegay of pink roses. Oscar Handelman, brother of the groom, was best man. The ushers were: Eddie Zunenshine, brother of the bride; Samuel Kirschner, cousin of the groom; Irving Yevzeroff, Herbert Lewis, Mendy Zunenshine, and Lawrence Deitcher, all cousins of the bride. Irving Handelman, brother of the groom, was junior usher. The floral decorations were of white and pink gladioli, roses, and pom-poms. There were centerpieces of white and pink Sweetheart roses on the tables. Mrs. Zunenshine, mother of the bride, wore a gown of turquoise-green lace and taffeta, with a matching Juliet cap, and had a gold-coloured orchid. The groom's mother, Mrs. Handelman, was in a gown of iridescent grayish taffeta, trimmed with pearl beading at the neckline; with a matching Juliet cap, and an orchid. The wedding trip was spent in New York; Atlantic City, N.J.; and Philadelphia, Pa.; the bride wearing a blue suit, with a box jacket, white and blue accessories, blue velveteen hat, and an orchid corsage. Mr. and Mrs. Handelman are residing at 4975 Maplewood Avenue, Apartment Four. Out-of-town wedding guests were: Mr. and Mrs. W. Seidler, great-uncle and great-aunt of the bride, of Baltimore, Md.; Mr. and Mrs. H. Yevzeroff, her cousins, of Baltimore, Md.; Mrs. L. Weisman, her cousin, of Philadelphia, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. I. A. Isenberg, and daughter, Miss Elaine Isenberg, uncle, aunt, and Mrs. M. Zunshine, L. Zunshine, and son; Gerald, the bride's cousin of Buffalo; Mrs. D. Saperstein, her aunt and son, Marshall, of Miami Beach, Florida; Mrs. I. Shulman, and daughter, Faygie, cousins of the groom, of Brooklyn, N.Y.; and Mrs. J. Marcovitch, cousins of the groom, of Philadelphia.

GARDNER-LOWIS

The marriage of Miss Susy Lowis, of Montreal, formerly of Glasgow, Scotland, to Bernard Gardner, son of Mrs. M. Gardner, of Quebec City, took place on Wednesday, September 8, at seven o'clock, at Young Israel Synagogue, Rabbi M. Lewittes officiating. Eric Weldon, cousin of the bride, gave her in marriage. She wore a ballerina-length gown of white Chantilly lace, having a portrait neckline, short sleeves, a form-fit-

LISGARTEN-COHEN

The marriage of Esther Marsha, daughter of Mrs. Shirley Cohen, 46 Mount Royal Avenue, and the late Benjamin Cohen, to Albert Lisgarten, son of Mrs. Anne Lisgarten, 118 Bellevue Avenue, took place on Sunday, August 29, at eight o'clock, at Murray House, with Rabbi Norman N. Shapiro officiating. The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Henry Cohen. She wore a ballet-length gown of white, eyelet-embroidered organdy, cut with high, buttoned neckline, short sleeves, and very bouffant skirt. Her net fingertip veil was attached to a pearl-beaded headpiece, and she carried a white Bible adorned with a white orchid. Mrs. Martin Klein, of Granite City, Ill., the bride's sister, was matron of honour, in a bouffant, ballet-length gown of ice-blue organza, with corsage of pale pink roses. Jack Abrams, of Venice, Cal., was best man. The canopy was decorated in white gladioli, chrysanthemums, and greenery. The bride's mother received, wearing a pale blue, shantung, sheath cocktail dress, trimmed in white beading; a pale blue veil headdress, studded in rhinestones; and corsage of pale pink roses and baby orchids. The groom's mother was in a pale blue, sculptured nylon, bouffant, cocktail dress; with rhinestone-studded blue veil headdress; and corsage of pale pink roses and baby orchids. For the trip to New York, the bride left in a black and white suit, with black velvet hat, and black patent leather accessories, and white orchid corsage. The couple are residing in Toronto. Out-of-town wedding guests were: Mr. and Mrs. M. Klein, of Granite City, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. D. Klein, of Milwaukee, Wis.; Mr. and Mrs. J. A Window To The World Through ORT

For the first time in his eighteen years Gerard Selam will usher in this Rosh Hashonah outside the hara (ghetto) walls. For that matter it will be a big occasion for the entire Selam family, since as far back as living memory goes they have always lived behind the ancient walls. Years ago it was in the hara of a small town in the remote south. When the disturbances came following Israel's independence it was no longer safe and three generations of Selams made the trek to Tunis. They could feel more secure among the 70,000 Jews of the city, but the way of life was the same. All twelve members of the family settled into a single airless room. Without light and without water, they were prey to every infectious disease. The chain that bound them to the ghetto more surely than any edict ever had before was poverty.

If all that is different now it is due to Gerard and to ORT. At first, as his brothers had done before him, it appeared his destiny to follow his father into the narrow, rutted streets as a peddler. To "supplement" the family income he took his place beside his father on the way to the synagogue to beg with a small box for alms. But Gerard broke the age-old familiar pattern two years ago.

He heard one day of a new apprenticeship plan that ORT had taken over, and that he was eligible. He had known boys who attended the modern ORT schools in the suburbs, but he could not meet the educational requirements. The apprenticeship program, however, was for him. His most difficult job was convincing his parents. How could they afford to have him go into a shop for only 500 francs to start, when he could make 1,500 on the streets? Harmony was finally re-established when the family was informed that the difference would be made up by a "bourse" (purse), and Gerard went to work in an electrical shop.

This was the first big step. Now things began to happen to Gerard. The pace of living accelerated. Three times a week, after work and Sundays, he had to rush to the ORT school where he was assigned to an electrical workshop, classes in theory, history, and Hebrew. The hours which used to weigh burdensomely, began to fly. The school became the center of his life. The more he gave to his studies the better was his work in the shop. He learned things about the electrical trade in the classroom that the small shop could never show him. His employer recognized this and Gerard's earnings were raised. But it was at the school that a window to the world was opened to him.

He took up basketball and stayed on after class on Sundays to play. Hot meals and vitamins gave him an energetic feeling. His new friends were a far cry from the lethargic, emaciated vagabonds of the ghetto. Above all, Gerard acquired a sense of his own worth and a will to alter his own lot and that of his family. Because he is now an electrician, Gerard has a trade that is much in demand. His weekly wage is many times what his father could get in a month. That is how it happens that the Selam family has left the ghetto behind and celebrates the New Year in an apartment in the "new" part of town.

There are 600 youngsters like Gerard Selam enrolled in the ORT apprenticeship program, which is supported by the JDC. Together, in the brief period of two years they have raised the regular income of ghetto families by over two million francs. Begging has fallen off and the community dole, the Halouk, has declined sharply. There are many fewer youth wandering in the streets and others too, are leaving the hara. Each apprentice and each ORT student means an entire family salvaged. With their new experiences these youth of the Tunis ghetto become the bearers of a new way of living for the whole community.

"Eshkolot" Is A New Hebrew Periodical

BY H. ISRAELI

The first issue of "Eshkolot," a Hebrew periodical devoted to the continual influence of Greek and Roman culture in the spiritual history of the Jewish people, is published by Magnes Press, affiliated to the Hebrew University, and its editors are faculty members, M. Schwabe, professor of Greek, and Joshua Gutman, professor of Jewish philosophy. "Eshkolot" is not a stuffy, footnoted publication; attractive in format, very readable, it is simultaneously directed at the specialist and the layman. Its frontispiece carries an excellent picture of what is reputed to be Philanois's statue of Plato, done in the philosopher's lifetime.

Professor A. Cherikover's analysis of "Antiochus' Persecutions and the Problems Involved" is perhaps the most significant and original contribution to a volume distinguished for its excellence. Historians have been puzzled by the violence of Antiochus' anti-Jewish persecutions, a lamentable digression from Greek traditions of tolerance. Professors Edward Meyer and Rostovtzev considered him one of the most constructive of all Seleucib rulers, which makes his behaviour all the more puzzling.

Professor Joseph Klausner dismissed Antiochus as a "degenerate." Nineteenth century historians offered the explanation that Antiochus turned so violently against the Jews because of his extreme devotion to Hellenistic culture. Neither explanation is satisfactory. Greece sought to impose her political authority, but never demanded that other peoples relinquish their religious convictions.

The Hebrews were dealt with more harshly. Dr. Elias Bickerman in his book, "God of the Maccabeans" blames the instigation of Hellenistic Jews for Antiochus conduct. Yet to assume that Jewish Hellenists actively persecuted Judaism seems far fetched and is unsupported by any historic evidence.

Cherikover believes that Antiochus' policy is traceable to a premature uprising by the "chassidim" in 169 B.C.E. preceding Apiphanes' war on the Jews! Jason and his Hellenistic Jews were driven from the capitol. One year later the Greek king stormed the capitol, taking a toll of forty thousand of its inhabitants, after which there was no peace between the Jews and the forces of Antiochus, led by Apolonius. Jewish guerrilla-warfare harassed the Greeks, who eventually defeated the Jews, exiled them from Jerusalem and divided their land among the Chieruchios.

Jerusalem was converted into a military fortress, inhabited by a licentious Syrian soldiery, and "Baal-Shamen", the Syrian god, was introduced into the Holy of Holies. The Torah, which the Jews carried with them into the wilderness of Judah, came to symbolize Jewish rebellion to the Greeks.

Dr. Leon Roth, former professor of philosophy at the Hebrew University, analyses Plato's "Gorgias" which, he says, is as much self-analysis of Plato himself as it is a study of Socrates. The Platonic Socrates, unlike the historic Socrates, escapes the political struggle and retires to the Academy. The historical Socrates maintains, that man must live by law, not judge it.

Plato draws a lucid and unqualified distinction between good and bad laws, concluding that only the good law deserves observance. Plato defends revolution through passivity or non-participation in politics. Socrates' tragic death determined Plato's attitude, as expressed in "Gorgias", which is an apology for Plato's own life, the passive life of a philosopher, a life of "justice and good deeds."

Professor Joshua Gutman considers the work of Philo, the epic poet, who may be the "old Philo" mentioned by Josephus Flavius. He wrote four books of poetry, of which very little was preserved through inclusion in an anthology edited by Alexander Plyhisto (1st century B.C.E.) He wrote on Jewish themes, was obviously under the influence of the Platonic or Phytagorean, and some of his descriptions bear close resemblance to writings by the Alexandrian Jewish philosopher, Philo on similar themes.

There are a number of other important studies in "Eshkolot." Should this periodical maintain its high level and encourage some of Israel's younger students of ancient civilization, it will contribute considerably to a field which still offers scope for inquisitive minds.

Street cars are steadily being replaced by trolley coaches and motor buses on the nation's transit lines. By the end of 1952 there were 2,424 street cars still in service, 1,086 less than at the close of 1946. In the same six years trolley coaches increased to 1,0 from 77 and buses to 2,090 from 1,491. While nearly 80% of all transit passengers travelled on street cars in 1946, less than 52% did so in 1952. Trolley coaches transported over 22% of the passengers in 1952 as against only 2% six years earlier while buses moved more than 26% as compared with 18% in 1946.

Last year Canada ranked first in foreign trade per capita for the first time since the war. Domestic exports were valued at $278.1 and imports at $296.52 for a total of $575.08 per Canadian.

The Pioneer, The Peddler, The Scholar, The Soldier Laid Foundation Of U.S. Jewry, Now In 300th Year

BY RABBI LEE J. LEVINGER

(Dr. Levinger, now a chaplain with the Veterans' Administration at Los Angeles, California, is the well-known World War I chaplain and historian. His book, "History Of The Jews In The United States", was published by the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, through whose courtesy the following article appears here.)

In this tercentenary year we are going to hear many times the central themes of American Jewish history. We shall be told how this community has grown in three hundred years from twenty-three persons to five million; how the United States of America was the first nation in the world to give equal rights of citizenship to Christians and Jews; how the Jews rendered worthy and often vital service to the nation. These significant themes may lose in interest, even though not in importance, with repetition. Perhaps it may be worth the effort to note how Jews appear in many a footnote to American history, past and present.

For Jews bob up at the most unexpected places, from early colonial days to the present. In the year 1695 the governor of South Carolina desired to interrogate some Indians captured in the border wars with the Spanish colony of Florida. Nobody about could speak the Indian language, but there was a Jew present to interpret Spanish. We do not even know his name; his very existence is known to us only in the obscure reminiscences of a colonial governor.

When John Charles Fremont made his epochal fifth expedition across the Rockies in 1854, tracing the route for the future railway to the West, one Solomon Nunes Carvalho was the official artist of the expedition. His fascinating book, "Travel And Adventure In The Far West," is being reprinted this year by the Jewish Publication Society.

In 1803, when New Orleans was still French territory, a retiring young man of twenty-eight settled there and opened a shop. When he died exactly a century ago, Judah Touro was famous the country over as a generous donor to many causes, Jewish, Christian and patriotic. In his will he left bequests to every Jewish congregation then existing in the country, to the neglected Jews of Jerusalem, and to a hospital in New Orleans. There is a Touro Street in Newport, Rhode Island, where he was born, and in New Orleans, where he died.

Every section of the country welcomed a few Jews among the pioneers, and usually one of them was an outstanding figure. For the Republic of Texas this was Henry Castro, born in France as Henri de Castro, member of a famous Jewish line. He made a contract with Sam Houston in 1842 to find colonists for the empty land, and in the following four years brought 5,000 immigrants from Alsace and the Rhineland, investing a great fortune in the enterprise. The town of Castroville bears his name, which the state later gave to one of its counties as well.

The first president of the American Federation of Labor, who held that office for thirty-eight years, was Samuel Gompers, an English Jew. As an immigrant boy of thirteen he assisted his father at the cigar makers' bench; he took his turn at reading to the other workers, and learned the art of public address; he attended classes at Cooper Union. The little boy who joined a labor union when that was a radical act, who organized many industries and led many strikes, became in his old age the dominating figure of the American labor movement.

At the historic siege of Fort McHenry in 1812, Francis Scott Key, an observer, conceived the "Star Spangled Banner." But others were present, too; the records show that eight Jews were listed among the defenders of the Fort. Naturally, for some Jews fought in every war and almost in every battle from the days of the revolution. In the Civil War seven Jews were awarded the Con-

Miss Bernice Sunderland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. Sunderland, 673 Bathurst Street, and her fiance, Jack Wolfe, son of Mrs. G. Wolfe, 300 Montrose Avenue, and the late I. Wolfe, celebrated their engagement at a dance and cocktail party with their friends: Misses Sandra Bonnin, Zelda Bonnin, Jean Yashinsky, Barbara Hoffman, Freda Myers, Arlene Feingold; also Martin Hoffman, Lenny Richmond, Merry Yashinsky, Monty Albert, Alvin Abramovitz, and Morty Biback. Miss Sunderland wore a bronze-coloured and black bouffant, nylon, cocktail dress, with corsage of yellow roses.

Roy Howard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Agar, 47 Barton Avenue, was called to the Reading of the Law at Pride of Israel Temple. He is the brother of Mrs. Harry Mirsky (Lorraine), Shallmar Boulevard; and Beverley; grandson of Mrs. L. Nizinsky, 104 Manning Avenue; and of Mr. and Mrs. M. Agar, 202 Brunswick Avenue. There was a luncheon, with one hundred guests. The hostess received, wearing a two-piece afternoon dress of black crepe and lace, with red velour hat, trimmed in ostrich plumes; and corsage of red roses. Roy made a speech. Rabbi Moses Handelman, his Hebrew teacher spoke. In the evening fifty guests were received at home.

Allan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Perlmutar, 11 Markdale Avenue, was called to the Reading of the Law at Hebrew Men of England Synagogue. He is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. A. Perlmutar, Baldwin Street. At the cocktail party, dinner, and reception the next evening, there were one hundred guests. Mrs. Perlmutar received, wearing a honey-beige-coloured lace, sheath, cocktail dress, with scoop neckline, trimmed in pearl and crystal beading; and mauve orchid corsage. Allan made a speech. David Perlmutar, Shallmar Boulevard, his uncle, was master of ceremonies. Vari-coloured gladioli, chrysanthemums, and white lighted tapers decorated the table. Out-of-town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Max Leibovitch, and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Levine, of Montreal, Que.; Mr. and Mrs. William Binder, of Washington, D. C.

Mesdames J. Klein, of Hamilton; M. Soberman, Vaughan Road; M. Klein, of Montreal, Que.; S. Miller, Queen Street West; and W. Klein, Fairholme Avenue, gave a miscellaneous shower at Murray House in honour of Miss Helen Ludwig, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Ludwig, Euclid Avenue, whose marriage to Max Klein, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Klein, 701 Shaw Street, takes place on November 14, at Shaw Street Synagogue. There were eighty guests. Mrs. Ludwig wore a grey crepe dress, and corsage of red roses; and Mrs. Harry Klein, the groom-elect's mother, a navy-blue sheer dress, and corsage of red roses. Miss Ludwig, the honouree, was in a beige and brown silk taffeta cocktail dress, designed with scoop neckline, and full skirt; and corsage of yellow roses. Vari-coloured chrysanthemums and white lighted tapers composed the table decoration.

Miss Ruth Baker, daughter of Mrs. T. Baker, Euclid Avenue, whose marriage to Sheldon Neskar, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Neskar, 53 Cliffside Drive, takes place on Sunday, November 14, at Bais Yehuda Synagogue, was entertained at a miscellaneous shower, at Murray House, given by Mrs. Neskar, the groom-elect's mother. The hostess received one hundred guests. She wore a blue taffeta, cocktail dress, made with low neckline, trimmed in white satin, studded in rhinestones, and full skirt, with corsage of red and white roses. Mrs. Baker wore a blue crepe dress, having velvet-embroidered motifs throughout, low neckline, and full skirt, with corsage of yellow and pink roses. The honouree was in a green, iridescent shantung, cocktail dress, in princess style, designed with scoop neckline in front and forming a V-effect at the back, and full skirt, with corsage of pink and white roses. Guests at the head table were: Mesdames B. Neskar, 8 Pell Street; M. Neskar, 1060 Shaw Street; H. Landsberg, 1060 Shaw Street; and S. Rudech, Northcliffe Boulevard. The table was centred with mixed roses and white lighted tapers.

Barry Sheldon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Allan Small, 76 Lynn Haven Road, was called to the Reading of the Law at Hebrew Men of England Synagogue. He is the brother of Franklin; grandson of Mr. and Mrs. M. Small, 712 Dufferin Street. Kiddush followed services. At a buffet dinner and reception, forty guests were present in the evening at home. Mrs. Allan Small received, wearing a two-piece, black crepe, cocktail suit, studded in rhinestones, with mauve orchid corsage; and Mrs. M. Small, the grandmother, wore a navy-blue crepe dress, with corsage of pink carnations. Those who lit candles [illegible] Duncannon Drive, Mr. and Mrs. William Feldman, Rosebury Road; Mr. and Mrs. Louis Cherney, of Peterborough; Mr. and Mrs. Sol Silverman, St. Clair Avenue West; Mr. and Mrs. Sol. Kaufman, St. Clair Avenue West; Mr. and Mrs. A. Molinaro, Sultana Avenue; Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Pachter, Invermay Avenue; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Pachter, Ossington Avenue; Mrs. J. Sparks, Rushton Road; Norton and Brian Feldman, Rosebury Road; and Barry Small, the bar-mitzvah, who made a speech. Mr. Small, the grandfather, made the blessing over the ceremonial challa. White chrysanthemums, gladioli, blue delphiniums, and blue lighted tapers decorated the table.

Miss Eleanor Nash, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Nash, of St. Catharines, whose marriage to Oscar Markovitz, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Markovitz, 143 Strathearn Road, takes place on October 24, in St. Catharines, was entertained at a luncheon at the Park Plaza Hotel, given by the groom-elect's mother. Receiving one hundred and twenty-five guests, the hostess wore a cocoa-coloured, needle-point lace, sheath cocktail dress; with bronze-beaded cocktail hat; and corsage of yellow roses and white carnations. Mrs. Nash, the bride-elect's mother, was in a blue, lace, sheath cocktail dress, studded in rhinestones; with white, beaded cocktail hat; and corsage of pink roses and white carnations. Miss Nash, the honouree, wore a white brocaded satin cocktail dress, cut with scoop neckline, and full skirt; and wristlet of Sweetheart roses. Assisting were Mrs. Sidney Freedman (nee Laura Markovitz), of Detroit, Mich.; and Mrs. Isadore Nash, 3841 Bathurst Street. The tables were decorated with yellow and white chrysanthemums, and the head table was centred with an arrangement of white chrysanthemums, red roses, and white lighted tapers set in silver candelabra. Mrs. Harry Rosenberg, of St. Catharines, the bride-elect's sister, was a guest.

gressional Medal of Honor, and three rabbis were appointed chaplains by President Lincoln.

In the colony of South Carolina, as the Revolution was beginning, Francis Salvador was a member of the Provincial Congress, the first Jew to hold elective office in the country, as well as one of the earliest victims of the war. When the shadows of the Civil War were threatening, in 1856, three young Jewish immigrants fought in the abolitionist band of John Brown in Kansas.

If we turn to the Pacific Coast, we find that in 1849, the very year of the Gold Rush, two minyanim observed the High Holydays in the village of San Francisco. Many a ghost town of today has a Jewish cemetery or other memories of those hectic days. The "great man" among the early Jews was Adolph Sutro, builder of a tunnel at the Comstock Lode and for many years mayor of San Francisco. But the best remembered even now is the strange figure of Emperor Norton, in his fantastic uniform, followed by two mongrel dogs. He lived for many years on the bounty of the San Franciscans, and issued scrip which was accepted as legal tender in every restaurant in town.

Hebrew was taught in the leading colleges in colonial days, not for the sake of the Jews but in order that Christian clergymen might learn the holy tongue. In one case at least the courses were given by a converted Jew. Judah Monis taught at Harvard for forty years in the first half of the eighteenth century, and wrote for his students the first Hebrew grammar to be printed in the New World.

If we look to the navy, we find a Commodore in the 1850's, the romantic Uriah P. Levy, and an Admiral in the Second World War, Ben Morreel. Three Jews have sat on the Supreme Court, and six in the Senate; their present representatives are Justice Felix Frankfurter and Senator Herbert Lehman.

So the Jews are interwoven in the very fabric of American history, in every period, in every section, in every area of the National life. As we study the growth of the thirteen little colonies into a great nation, we see at the same time the founding and growth of their Jewish institutions.

In 1656, just two years after the first landing, a Jewish cemetery was founded in New Amsterdam, and in 1682 the first synagogue was opened for worship in the same city, by that time called New York. When the Christian Sunday School movement was new, Rebecca Gratz founded the first Jewish Sunday School in Philadelphia in 1838. Just five years later, in 1843, twelve young German immigrants met in New York under the leadership of one Henry Jones (previously Heinrich Jonas), to organize the first Jewish fraternal order in all history, the Bnai Brith. One of their purposes was to unify the little Jewish community, torn by the struggles of rival congregations.

By the 1870's a movement to unite congregations was consummated by Rabbi Isaac Mayer Wise, of Cincinnati. The Union of American Hebrew Congregations became a reality in 1871 and the Hebrew Union College, the oldest Jewish college to endure, in 1875.

Jewish life grew with Jewish numbers; Judaism, as well as individual Jews, was incorporated in the very structure of American life. The immense Jewish community which celebrates the Tercentenary traces its foundation to the achievements of the pioneer, the peddler, the scholar, the soldier of these eventful centuries.

Naval Flotilla Has Great Time On Cruise

An Israel naval flotilla which had been on exercises in the Mediterranean returned to its base. The flotilla made courtesy calls at the Ports of Piraeus (Greece), Istanbul (Turkey), Venice (Italy), Split (Yugoslavia), and Valetta (Malta). During the visit of the flotilla to Greece, the Flotilla Commander, Alouf Mishne Shlomo Erel, and Sgan Alouf A. Davidowitz, received decorations in the name of the King of Greece for the part the ships under their command had played during the relief operations following the earthquake in the Greek Islands in August, 1953. In Piraeus harbor the ships were visited by the Commander-in-Chief of the Greek Navy, as well as by many thousands of Athenians.

While in Istanbul a contingent of Israel sailors marched 6 kilometres from their ships to the Monument of the Republic where Alouf Mishne Erel laid a wreath in the form of an anchor at the foot of the monument. The visit to Venice coincided with the "Festival of Lights" held in the town, and the courtesies and attentions shown to the Israel ships and crews were more striking because of the gaiety of the occasion.

At the Yugoslav port of Split, the Commander-in-Chief of the Yugoslav Navy visited the Israel flagship, and invited the officers of the flotilla to visit the Yugoslav Naval Academy. The series of courtesy calls ended with a visit to Valetta, Malta, where the beflagged ships of the flotilla entered the harbor on the birthday of Queen Elizabeth. Among the visitors to the Israel ships were the Supreme NATO Commander in the Mediterranean, Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, the Governor of Malta and the Prime Minister of the Island. Each ship of the flotilla was adopted by a British man-of-war which acted as host to the visiting ship throughout the stay in Malta.

WATERMAN-LEMBERG

The marriage of Helen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. Lemberg, 351 Brunswick Avenue, to Sydney Waterman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Waterman, of London, England, took place on September 11, at the home of Rabbi David Monson, Strathearn Road.

FELDMAN-GREENBAUM

The marriage of Marilyn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Greenbaum, 624 Briarhill Avenue, to Allen Feldman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Feldman, 733 Briarhill Avenue, took place on Tuesday, September 7, at six o'clock, at Shaarei Shomayim Synagogue, with Rabbi Walter S. Wurzburger officiating, assisted by Cantor Nathan Adler. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. Gowned in white Chantilly lace and satin, designed with scoop-neckline appliqued in motifs of seed-pearl-beading, long sleeves, moulded bodice, and bouffant skirt having pleated tulle inserts, and forming a short train, she had an illusion fingertip veil, gathered to a Chantilly lace Juliet cap, trimmed in pearl beading, and carried a white prayer book, adorned with a white orchid, stephanotis, and streamers. Mrs. Edward Turack, the groom's sister, was matron of honour. She wore a cocktail-length gown of teal-blue shantung, cut with scoop-neckline, and full skirt. Her headpiece was a matching hat, and she carried pink Sweetheart roses, carnations, and chrysanthemums. The bridesmaids were pink, shantung, cocktail gowns, made like that of the matron of honour. They were: Mrs. M. Clavir, Mrs. S. Klotz, Misses Lyla Stern, and Charlotte Benson. They Ushers were: Bobby Greenbaum, Herbert Greenbaum, Donald Greenbaum, Leslie Feldman, Ronald Feldman, Fred Feldman, Gerald Greenbaum, Dr. Edward Turack, David Sugarman, and A. Schwartz. Lorne Greenbaum, wearing a tuxedo, was ringbearer. The Synagogue was decorated in white chrysanthemums and gladioli. The bride's mother wore a pink-champagne-coloured gown, made with lace bodice, and full, organza skirt; matching feathered hat; and mauve orchid wrist corsage. The groom's mother was in a lace gown of grey over pink; with pink feathered hat, and mauve orchid corsage. For the trip to Grossinger's, in Ferndale, N. Y.; New York; and Washington, D. C., the bride left in a teal-blue-coloured wool suit, trimmed in drop-pearl-beading, with matching accessories, and a white orchid corsage. They are residing at 624 Briarhill Avenue. Mr. and Mrs. M. Green, of Ottawa; and Mr. and Mrs. A. Hotz, of Hamilton, were wedding guests.

SKURKA-LEVITT

The marriage of Renee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Levitt, 516 Vesta Drive, to Fred Skurka, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Skurka, 261 Winnett Avenue, took place on Sunday, September 5, at five o'clock, at Yeshiva Torath Chaim, with Rabbi A. Price and Rabbi Bernard Rosenswaig officiating. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She wore white Chantilly lace and tulle over satin. Her gown was fashioned with beaded, appliqued neckline, and long, pointed sleeves, and the bouffant skirt, falling softly over a hooped crinoline, was made with two fan-shaped panels of accordion-pleated tulle. Her fingertip tulle illusion veil was attached to a beaded, lace, shell cap, and she carried a white prayer book, adorned with a white orchid and blue delphiniums. Miss Beatrice Skurka, the groom's sister, was maid of honour, in a strapless, bouffant gown of mauve net, with matching stole. She had a circlet of pink roses in her hair, and carried a nosegay of vari-coloured roses, chrysanthemums, and delphiniums. The bridesmaids, wearing similarly-styled gowns, were: Misses Anne Levine, in blue; Mamie Katzman, in shrimp-colour; and Evelyn Tarnow, in aquamarine-blue. They had circlets of pink roses in their hair, and carried nosegays of mixed roses, chrysanthemums, and delphiniums. The junior bridesmaids, in bouffant dresses of nylon over crinolines, were: Gloria Levitt, the bride's sister, in pink; and Sharon Citron, in blue. Their headpieces were of pink roses, and they carried tiny matching nosegays. Herbert Finklestein was best man. Ushers were: Sol. Levitt, Fred Levitt, the bride's brothers; Allan Bernholtz, Harvey Citron, Philip Wynn, and Murray Grossman. The Synagogue was decorated in white gladioli and chrysanthemums. The bride's mother wore a waltz-length gown of blue Chantilly lace with scalloped, beaded neckline, inset with pink, pleated nylon, and a full skirt; also a matching beaded cap, and corsage of pink roses. The groom's mother wore a strapless gown of blue-green, silk organza and tulle, with matching tiny jacket; also a beaded cap, and corsage of yellow roses. For the motor trip through the United States, the bride left in a navy-blue and white linen dress and matching jacket, with white hat, and white orchid corsage. They are residing in Toronto.

The "Marmorhallet" . . . where the Seagram Collection was shown.

They're talking about Canada the world over

This sketch by the prominent Swedish artist, Gunnar Brusewitz, depicts Stockholm's "Marble Halls". It was here that the Seagram Collection of Paintings of Canadian Cities was visited by more than 31,000 Swedish citizens who came to see this colourful Canadian exhibition.

Everywhere these paintings went ...north and south of the equator... on both sides of the Atlantic...they won new friends and favourable comment for Canada. In sixteen cities along a 30,000-mile international route through 15 foreign lands, more than a quarter of a million people came to see these original canvases of 22 of our cities, and from them gain a new understanding of Canada and her remarkable achievements.

During its year abroad, the Seagram Collection of Paintings earned for Canada thousands of columns of newspaper reports, editorials, reviews and pictures; magazine articles; radio and television broadcasts; newsreel films—all commenting on these portrayals of our thriving cities, and all serving to make Canada talked about the world over.

In The Field Of Creative, Industrial Design

BY HENRY FINKEL, OF MONTREAL

When this new kind of man called an industrial designer relaxes at some social function, and the nature of his activity is discovered, the conversation soon pivots on the question, "Why don't they do this, or make that?" The industrial designer answers, that, as the personal representative of "they" he has been privileged to witness some of the mysteries of industry; he then proceeds happily to talk shop.

Industrial design is one kind of shop talk that most people can follow and enjoy. Half of the industrial designer's work consists of figuring out what to design, and how to design it. The other half is the technical side of his work, preparing the drawings, details and specifications of the things that need to be made, so that they can be manufactured most effectively to satisfy the ultimate user most completely.

The design of a commodity for mass use follows a simple logical pattern: the article must work easily and effectively; it should be simple to manufacture out of readily available materials and standard parts; it must be a joy to the eye; and, should it ever need repairing, must require no more than stock tools and minimum skills. It is easy to deduce that anyone with the requisite ability, experience, vision, ingenuity, perspicacity, knowledge of materials, appreciation of structure, and sense of form and color can be an industrial designer. So far, only thirty individuals in all of Canada have achieved the formal status of "industrial designer" as members of the federally chartered Association of Canadian Industrial Designers.

The real work of an industrial designer is the designing of any product that industry will turn out in large quantities. Some practitioners do additional work, such as package and trade mark design, displays, exhibition booths, interior design and custom furniture design. The designer's tools are his brains and his pencil. He bases his work on a few clearly stated principles which allow him to design any product, in any material, in any size.

Creative thinking is the cornerstone upon which a designer builds his successes. Newness for the sake of novelty is not enough to give validity to a new product design. But novelty built on a changing social scene, or an opportune new material, a recently developed production technique, or a valid new application of an old idea, that novelty is generic, and therefore real. Strangely enough, the product growing from such roots will almost inevitably be a good one, and will enjoy a popular success.

The idea of creative design is hardly new. It had been going on long before industrial designers were recognized as such, and even now is known to blossom forth without benefit of professional designer. The advantage of the industrial designer is that he puts such creative design on a production line basis, conceiving new states for products as part of his daily routine.

The executives of industry, the anonymous "they" of our questioners, are always alert to the things that will improve their businesses. "They" usually have made most of the things people ask for. The industrial world is cluttered with good product ideas that somehow or other did not "catch on".

The fault may have been in the product itself, needing better construction, stronger or other material, or just not being properly functional. Equally it may have been merchandised poorly, so that the average householder never even got to see it. Finances might have tripped the budding company and killed a good product in its infancy. On the other hand, the very thing you ask for may be readily available, just around the corner, but because you don't expect to find it there, you won't think of looking for it. "They" are not always to be blamed.

As the result of competitive manufacture and sales, industrial products are constantly being revised, almost invariably for the better. It is an axiom in business today that if a firm does not progress it must inevitably recede. There is no such thing as remaining fixed and firm. Security lies in venture. Of course, trying to find something original and exclusive is both the goal and the biggest challenge to every manufacturer.

Today's inventions rarely merit the coveted "basic" patent. We are in an era of refinements, of novel combinations and of ingenious applications. Each year tells its own industrial and commercial success stories, which go to prove that something original or exclusive or even just what the public wants can be produced, in spite of the plethora of things done in the past. It is interesting that the larger successes tie in with the formal approach to products used by the industrial designer, and his touch can be discerned somewhere or other in the final product result.

In many respects, industrial design is a form of routine invention, with certain specialized skills relating to appearance, manufacture and merchandising thrown in. Manufacturers need new products and product ideas today more than ever before. Fifty years ago and more, a large industry could be built up on a single small product that did not vary one iota throughout its many years of life. It greeted its public in the same shape, in the same package, with the same label in the same color combination, until it etched its way into the life of the day as firmly as bread and butter.

How many industrial empires and family fortunes were established on these relatively simple bits of merchandise! Today, however, change is the most constant thing we know. Last year's car—or refrigerator, or dresses or what have you are social outcasts, and the newer, glossier, more functional, and more colorful products are the order of the day.

There is a clanging in the distance that says that this need for annual change, fostered so happily by a growing industry, is becoming a beast that will devour its own creator. Product changes now require such fantastic tooling costs that most of the large producers are seeking alternate methods of appeasing the now insatiable public. It is here, happily, that the industrial designer is finding his greatest activity. By keeping abreast of new materials and methods, by keeping his mind free of fixed ideas, by probing the limit of public acceptance, he is able to provide a maximum of product interest for a minimum manufacturing means.

As in other practical arts, the successful industrial designer is a true mirror of his times. He can gauge the public temper, sense the things they want and know how far they will go to get them. He will also be keenly aware of the other side of the medal, and not strain the industrial machine too abusively. He is the liaison between the user and the maker, and, knowing the ultimate good taste of the public, will work hard to keep the shoddy and the false out of his work. If a need exists for a product, the product will surely be made. In addition, it is fully functional, that is to say, that is properly designed in its every aspect, it will have wide distribution and wide acceptance.
